Ruff Times forecasting rough times

Terry Jeffers, president of Target Publishers, Inc. of Alamo. "The Ruff Times" is published by Target.

ALAMO — Howard J. Ruff spearheads an organization geared to continually advise members how to prepare for various crises that stand a good chance of cropping up in the United States.

Ruff indicated economic troubles head the current problem list with spinoffs related to health and weather. His background includes spending five years as an investment counselor.

The organization, Target Publishers, Inc., headquarters at 1451 Danville Blvd., Alamo, 94507 (P.O. Box 172). Terry Jeffers is president of Target, Inc. Ruff is chairman of the board plus editor-in-chief of "The Ruff Times" which is Target's newsletter published twice a month.

Jeffers explained 32,000 people pay the $95 yearly subscription tab for "The Ruff Times" which also entitles them to four special issues plus access to Target's Hotlines. Through these Hotlines, subscribers to "The Ruff Times" can be put in touch with consultants in specialized fields who answer subscriber questions related to a particular field. Each consultant is checked out for six months before acceptance by Target, Jeffers added.

During a two-day Ruff Times National Convention at Disneyland last week, roughly 1,500 people paid $75 a head to hear what Ruff, two Senators and experts from diversified fields had to say about "the coming depression."

However, Ruff said he had no intention of coming off as a prophet of doom.

"I'm not forecasting the end of Western civilization," he continued. "We might have a few bad years. But I believe in anti-panic — getting prepared."

He admitted his studies and research indicated a trend toward a "temporary period of deep trouble just ahead — a fiscal crisis, caused by inflation and weather problems, triggering world-wide depression."

He said we have been in an abnormal moderate weather condition for the past 40 years are swinging back to a normal "cooling" period. The combination of the energy crunch and cooler weather will cause problems, he said. Ruff used to teach meteorology to pilots.

He expanded on the depression and related themes in one of his books, "Famine and Survival in America."

Regarding real estate in Contra Costa County, Ruff said 35 per cent of the houses were built and held by speculators. He added if this speculative bubble ran true to form it would burst and homeowners would lose their shirts.

"I advise people to sell their property now and rent," Ruff said. "If they can't do that, then borrow money, against their house if necessary, and invest it soundly."

He also advised people to invest in gold and silver coins, diamonds, antiques, rare stamps and the like.

Pleasanton's future

Council passes contested plan to guide growth

PLEASANTON — The plan. It was designed to carefully guide the city's future growth for the benefit of all residents.

Possible side effects. It will likely raise the price of new homes by a few hundred to $1,000. It may trigger law suits from developers who claim a city program can't supercede previous agreements.

City council Thursday voted on each segment of the proposed growth management plan — formally called the Pleasanton residential allocation program.

Actions taken during the six-hour meeting were the final steps necessary before council can adopt an ordinance putting the 20-year plan into effect.

Growth management plans are a new trend among California cities and Pleasanton officials and staff have worked on this program well over a year.

The intricate plan sets up a system under which developers will compete with each other for project approval.

The idea behind the plan's point rating system is to encourage housing developments which will enhance the city in design, location and financial benefits.

Council is expected to introduce the ordinance during its regular meeting Tuesday, 8 p.m., at 30 West Angela Street.

Under the program, housing in Pleasanton will increase at a rate of 2 percent a year in order to limit population to 48,000 by 1996. Approximately 250 new residences, including single family homes and apartments, will be built each year.

Persons who want to build four homes or fewer on one lot or a subdivided lot wouldn't be affected by the program. The requirements also wouldn't affect those wishing to build homes on lots 20-acres or a larger, nor those who plan to use septic tanks in four or fewer homes.

New Dublin hub includes major stores

DUBLIN — A big commercial complex including Ward's and Gemco stores and a theatre will be constructed here by a firm based in southern California.

Dublin Associates, with an address in Marina Del Rey, will build a 126,000 square foot Ward's store, a 105,000 square foot Gemco store, and a 14,000 square foot theatre between Amador Valley Boulevard and Dublin Boulevard west of Amador Plaza Road.

The property is in the vicinity of Handyman.

Also planned in the development is a 25,000 square foot racquetball facility, a 15,000 square foot automotive parts store affiliated with the larger Ward's store, an 8,000 square foot drive-in bank, a gas station at the Gemco building, and a nursery.

The large Gemco and Ward's stores are permitted uses in the retail commercial zoning on the property, but the smaller buildings will require conditional use permits from Alameda County.

County Zoning Administrator Richard Flynn will conduct a public hearing on the conditional use permits at 1:30 p.m. March 15 in the county public works building, 399 Elmhurst, Hayward.

City ponders bedroom tax boost

PLEASANTON — An increased bedroom tax levied against new construction is being seriously considered by city council as a way to beef up the city's low capital improvement fund.

If adopted, the increase would not affect current homeowners, but would raise the price of new homes.

Developers now pay between zero and $45 per bedroom for each new home built, depending on how the development is zoned.

The revenue has, for the past five years, been used for park improvements.

Council member Ken Mercer would like to see that tax raised to approximately $500 per new home and be used for all city capital improvements such as streets, sewer lines and water mains.

Thursday all council members but mayor Bob Philcox supported Mercer's idea and planned the contribution sections of the proposed residential allocation program anticipating an increase in the tax.

The bedroom tax is levied when a developer completes a house. It can be assumed that cost is passed along to the home buyer.

Council has instructed staff to complete a detailed study to determine what the increase should be and on what the additional revenue will be spent.

A preliminary staff study released Feb. 1 indicates the city would need a tax of $370 per bedroom just to complete all of the "necessary" capital improvement projects planned over the next 20 years.

Staff, however, acknowledges that the city could finish one major improvement project each year if the tax brought in $500 per home.

"I'm just trying to guarantee that those people who move into town pay for a proportionate charge of the capital improvements in Pleasanton," said Mercer.

Philcox does not support a tax increase against new construction because "it's not fair to ask new people to pay for improvements which benefit the entire city."

At least one public hearing would be held before such an increase is adopted, according to city attorney Harvey Levine.

Jarvis reform stirs state

Schools, city, county and state government are lining up against it. Homeowners and taxpayer groups are supporting it.

It's the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative and just everybody's got a stand on the hottest issue in California politics.

According to one of the sponsors, the initiative has the only support it really needs — that of the California electorate.

Steve Sesko has lived, worked and studied in Japan, and came away with a great appreciation for one of the most delicate cultural ceremonies in the Orient — the Japanese Tea Ceremony.

Sesko, who will soon return to that country to train buyers and sellers in business about the Japanese culture, first went to the Orient on a Rotary International fellowship.

Recently, he performed the intricate Tea Ceremony at the Livermore Unitarian Fellowship. He explains the ritual, the delicacy and the elegant simplicity of a custom that dates back some at least 400 years.

City mulls insurance cost

LIVERMORE — The city council must decide Monday on the method of financing to pay the employer's costs of covering all city employees with unemployment insurance.

The council will meet at 8 p.m. Monday at the municipal court chambers on South Livermore Avenue.

George Nolan, director of finance, will discuss the three possible methods and make recommendations during the meeting. The city has the choice of the contribution rate method, where the city would pay 3.6 per cent of the first $6,000 of annual wages per employee to the state, or the cost reimbursement method, where the city would reimburse the state for every dollar of benefits paid to former employees.

The third method, which is the one Nolan will recommend to the council, would be a local public entity employees fund. The estimated annual cost to Livermore would be $36,000, at current levels, and would be paid through a prepaid reserve account.

The balance remaining is refundable if the city leaves the fund.

Nolan, in his report to the council, points out that the gradual conversion from federal funding to local government funding would be important to the city regarding the timing of any layoffs of municipal employees that will be required by passage of the Jarvis amendment. The claims filed by former employees through July, 1978, evidently are charged 100 per cent to the transitional (federal) funding and gradually change over to 100 per cent local funding by mid-1979, Nolan says.

Also on the agenda will be the public hearing on proposed zoning ordinance amendments for the central business district to implement the Central Area Plan approved by the council in December.

The council will study recommendations from the planning commission on the amendments, including the proposed exclusion of supermarkets as a permitted and conditional use in the area.

Sewer ban lift possible in mid-April

A ban prohibiting additional sewer connections in Livermore and Dublin could be lifted in mid-April if progress on the $28 million sewage export pipeline project proceeds as expected.

Fred H. Dierker, executive officer of the Regional Water Quality Control Board, told The Times Friday that the ban would continue at least until $4.2 million in revenue bonds to finance the project's local share were sold and construction contracts for the 31-mile pipeline project were let.

Dierker said only then would he put the request to lift the ban on the agenda and ask the board to consider it.

The regional board imposed the sewer hookup ban in December 1976 when the Livermore and Dublin sewage treatment plants defied the board's order to stop dumping effluent into Alameda Creek. That effluent fouled south county underground water supplies in violation of e.p.e. pollution standards.

Since the ban was imposed, residential and commercial construction has slowed due to the unavailability of connections to the two sewage treatment plants.

Relief is now in sight, however, since the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) voted last Wednesday to sell the bonds to a New York firm. Project Manager Robert Bradford said the bond sale would be completed in a few days.

Bradford said he expected construction contracts would be let before March 15, removing the last major roadblock to a lifting of the sewer plant hookup prohibition.

Because agendas for the regional board's meetings are made up three weeks in advance, the earliest the board would probably consider lifting the ban would be at its April 18 meeting.

Dierker said a request at last week's regional board meeting to allow 13 sewer connections at Livermore was denied because a pump malfunction at the treatment plant caused the discharge violations to be worse than when the hookup ban was originally instituted.

I-580 traffic relief?

SACRAMENTO — The bill by Sen. John Holmdahl (D-Castro Valley) to lift diamond lane restrictions on Interstate 580 passed the Senate Friday by a 21-2 margin and now awaits approval by the Assembly.

The resolution directs state agencies to seek negotiations with the Sierra Club to eliminate diamond lanes between Pleasanton and Castro Valley and to initiate a new environmental impact report before lifting the restrictions without Sierra Club consent.

Holmdahl, who was outraged over the diamond lane deal between the Brown administration and the Sierra Club, said that taxpayers are not getting their money's worth out of the $34 million interstate addition.

Flasher hits Rincon Avenue

LIVERMORE — A Livermore woman and her 8-year-old daughter were the victims of a man who exposed himself on Rincon Avenue Wednesday, police reported.

The woman told police she had exited the Flair Market and was stepping into her vehicle about 10:10 p.m. when her daughter pointed to a man exposing himself. She quickly drove away and called police.

The man covered the lower portion of his face with his left arm and wore a hat that covered his forehead, the woman told officers. He then calmly walked towards May Nissen Park, she said.

The suspect is described as a white man, about 5-foot-6 with a slim build.

LIVERMORE — A man using a fraudulent name ran up a $168 bill at the Holiday Inn before leaving without checking out, police reported.

The man stayed four nights at the hotel after checking in the fraudulent sponsorship of a major business firm. Police have traced the suspect's aliases and are attempting to locate him.

PLEASANTON — A car parked in an enclosed auto shop area at Foothill High School was burglarized of two bucket seats recently, police reported.

The car was locked. There are no suspects.

LIVERMORE — A woman who was allegedly drunk in public and refused to obey police orders was arrested Thursday, police reported.

Police said Virginia Hope Wignall, 51, of 629 Caliente Drive was pushing a man in a First Street parking lot about 2 a.m. Officer Dave Hollander said the woman refused to obey police orders and verbally abused him.

Wignall was booked on suspicion of being drunk in public and resisting arrest.

PLEASANTON — Complaints of noisy motorcycles riding near flood control channels near Mohr Avenue and Santa Rita Road Thursday evening led to the arrest of a 14-year-old youth on suspicion of trespassing, police reported.

Five motorcyclists were sighted but only one was apprehended. The youth's cycle was impounded, police said.

Valley 'outsiders' seek county trustee

Two residents of a remote section of the largely Livermore-Amador Valley county schools trustee area have now filed for the position held the past 12 years by Virginia Birdsall of Livermore.

Charles Conlin of 2608 Terrace Brook in the East Oakland Hills area filed earlier this week for the county school board seat Mrs. Birdsall previously said she would not seek again. Conlin joins John W. McDonald, 10521 Stella St., Oakland, in a bid to represent Trustee Area 7, whose population is some 95 percent in the Livermore-Amador Valley.

Also filing in the last few days were Robert Coney, present deputy superintendent of county schools, for the superintendent's position to be vacated by Rock LaFleche, and Neil Shumate, a teacher at Alisal School in Pleasanton who will challenge Board of Supervisors chairman Charles Santana. Both are Hayward residents.

Shumate was the only one filing in district 2 through Friday.

Incumbents Mary Hardy of Piedmont and Charles Deadrich of Hayward previously filed for board of education.

The entry of Conlin and McDonald into the Trustee Area 7 race results from a recent modification of trustee boundaries that added a sliver of the East Oakland Hills area to the district.

Previous to last year, the Valley had two representatives on the county schools board—Mrs. Birdsall and Jack Hagerty of Pleasanton. Hagerty's district was eliminated by the one-man, one-vote edict which gave rise to an additional trustee area in Oakland.

Deadline for filing is Friday, March 10.

Dr. Jack Goodfellow

Dr. Jack Goodfellow, 83, died Feb. 23, 1978, in Claremont. He had been a resident of Pleasanton for 19 years before moving to Claremont in 1977.

A native of South Dakota, Dr. Goodfellow practiced medicine in Oakland 47 years before retiring in 1969. He was a member of the Piedmont Post of the American Legion, Our Lady of Assumption Church in Claremont and a veteran of World War I, having served with the U.S. Army Air Corps.

Survivors include his wife, Catherine Goodfellow; a son, Jack Goodfellow Jr.; two daughters, Janet Shelley of Loomis and Dorothy Newstetter of Vista; eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Rosary will be recited Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Graham-Hitch Mortuary, 675 St. John St., Pleasanton. A Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated Tuesday, 10:30 a.m., at St. Augustines Catholic Church, 900 E. Angela, Pleasanton. Burial will follow in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, Hayward.

Sylvia Nelson

Services will be held tomorrow for Sylvia K. Nelson, a Pleasanton resident who died Friday at the age of 63.

Born in California, she worked for 16 years at the Pleasanton Library as a reference clerk.

She is survived by her husband, Joseph, and her two sons, Ronald and Jaye, all of Pleasanton. She also leaves behind two sisters, Mildred Moore of Los Angeles and Helen Leslie of Carmel; a brother, George Ritter of San Leandro, and five grandchildren.

Services begin at 2 p.m. at the Graham-Hitch Mortuary, 675 St. John Street in Pleasanton, with the Rev. Gerald V. Case officiating. Burial will follow in the Pleasanton Memorial Gardens.

Supervisor Hasseltine

Citizen group leads recall move

ALAMO — Some San Ramon Valley homeowners are stepping up the pace to try and recall Contra Costa County's fifth district supervisor, Eric Hasseltine.

A nucleus group of 20 met Friday night at the home of Marge Hines of Alamo. She initiated the recall movement. Hines said "50 or more" other people who had contacted her were unable to attend.

The group dubbed themselves "Citizens for Representative Government" (CRG).

CRG members and others are displeased with Hasseltine's alleged "close relationship" with developers plus what they consider to be his "lack of responsible action" regarding area housing development.

"We are starting as a small group but believe a mushroom effect will add to our numbers," Rines explained. "We are going to go through with this."

The next meeting is scheduled for March 7, she said.

Hines reported that although she had begun considering the recall in December, she did not take any overt action until this month.

However, she admitted she and the group have hit a snag since election codes, which include recall procedures, have become more stringent since December.

"Among other things, we, not the county, have to pay for getting the recall petition printed and have to get legal counsel to decipher the new code."

She added the new mire of red tape was "a real pain to citizens."

Hines declared CRG had no ulterior motives in recalling Hasseltine.

"We just think he should be made to be responsible for actions he has been taking. We believe people should be able to develop their property but not at the expense of other people's property in which they have already invested."

She added that the San Ramon Valley Planning Commission "should not be composed of a majority of realtors, and for true people's representation in government, realtors should not be Hasseltine's major contributors."

"It may be acceptable to have a campaign fund started," she continued, "but there should be a better balance between area homeowners and realtors on the commission."

Hines said besides wanting balanced growth and development, CRG was also interested in assuring better regulation of access roads plus better environmental procedures for preserving the rural atmosphere.

Hines and other homeowners from Alamo and Danville appeared on Channel 7 TV last week to state their case, she said.

'Big red monster' burps intricate membrane filters

PLEASANTON — After a year's worth of planning and tinkering, the Nuclepore Corporation is finally ready to put their "big red monster" into operation.

"You should have seen the smiles around here," said Nuclepore's Vice President E.T. Hubbard. "We put the film in and it ran like a charm."

And, what does this big red monster do? It manipulates huge rolls of cellophane-like film so that a nuclear reactor can make billions of tiny holes in it producing membrane filters used by medical hospitals and laboratories. "Even wine makers use these filters," Hubbard said.

The Nuclepore Corporation, a spin-off of General Electric's Vallecitos nuclear facility, has grown from a mere 16 employees in 1972, to its present staff of 50. They operate from offices on Commerce Circle, a business complex behind Tennis Town at the intersection of I-580 and I-680.

"Presently we are contracted with G.E. Vallecitos for irradiation of the film," Hubbard said. He noted, however, that Nuclepore has been looking for a second irradiation source since parts of Vallecitos have been subject to closure due to its location near earthquake fault zones.

According to Hubbard, plans call for shipment of the big red monster next week to Columbia, Mo. where it will be installed at the University of Missouri for the irradiation process from a research reactor there.

Although Nuclepore sunk about $150,000 into development of their big red monster, they hope it will serve for perhaps five times their present market which equals nearly $2 million in annual sales.

Hubbard said Nuclepore's membrane filter products are sold to some 10,000 customers for both medical and commercial purposes. He said a large fraction of these products are needed to filter water used by semi-conductor manufacturers who make calculators, computers, and solid state electronic equipment.

The plastic film used by Nuclepore is about 19 inches wide and a little thicker than a human hair. It comes on rolls up to a mile and a half long and the nuclear irradiation process etches some 30 billion holes per square inch.

Nuclepore sells discs of this material ranging from dime size to 12 inches in diameter.

Area residents injured in Highway 120 collision

Two local residents remain in a San Joaquin County hospital following a head-on accident near Stockton last Sunday.

Michael Douglas Cole, 25, of 3867 Blackhawk Road in Danville, and Ronald Hayes, 27, of 2347 Westminster Way in Livermore, are both in the intensive care unit of San Joaquin County Hospital, a spokesman said.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Cole was traveling eastbound on Highway 120 about 3 p.m. when he attempted to overtake and pass another vehicle. He pulled out and saw a car approaching from the opposite direction, the spokesman said, so tried to turn back into his lane but lost control of his vehicle.

His vehicle collided with a car driven by Louis Mathias Sittenauer, 52, of Novato, about a mile past McKinley Avenue, the spokesman said.

Cole is listed in critical condition and remains comatose in the intensive care unit, a hospital spokesman said. Hayes is in poor condition in the intensive care unit.

Sittenauer's wife, Ruth Marie, 50, was treated for injuries and released from San Joaquin County Hospital. The accident is under investigation.

East Bay Parks supporting Sen. Behr's tax measure

Directors of the East Bay Regional Park District have come out in unanimous support of Senator

Peter Behr's property tax relief measure.

"This is the only game in town," said Oakland Director Harlan Kessel, chairman of the EBRPD board legislative committee. "I don't see where anyone could be opposed to it."

The brief EBRPD resolution of support contained no reference to the Jarvis-Gann initiative, but board President Paul J. Badger of Pinole said: "We are well aware of the significance of this action... in opposition to the initiative."

Copies of the resolution were sent to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and all state legislators representing Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

"Like the Jarvis initiative, the Behr proposal drastically slashes property taxes, the chief revenue source of local government. But, unlike the Jarvis so-called reform, it offers alternative revenue to fund the essential services closest to our homes and our lives," Kessel said.

Council seeker leads in campaign disclosure

PLEASANTON — City council candidate Walt Wood turned in his campaign finance disclosure papers a few hours after deadline Thursday, listing a total of $1,322 in cash received to date.

Of that amount, $1,119 was contributed since Jan. 23 and $969 came from individuals who contributed less than $50.

Wood has taken the lead in contributions this filing period from Stan Kephart, who has received $1,113 to date. At the last filing deadline in January, Kephart had received $851 — far more than the other candidates who had raised less than $100 each.

Edmond Alves has accepted a total of $768 during his campaign so far. Candidates John Foley and Oliver Anjo filed short forms last week, indicating that neither has received or spent more than $200.

Edwin Meyer did not file disclosure papers on either the January or February deadline. Meyer tried to pull out of the race the day after the nomination deadline closed and has said he is not actively campaigning.

Growth guidelines may prompt builders' suits

Developers of housing tracts and apartment buildings are the targets of the plan, as it is those developments which will determine the character of the city in the future.

If the plan is adopted as currently written, city council will become the allocation board and will be responsible for final approval of all projects — just as the council is now.

The normal government steps such as design review, and tract map approval will remain, but the plan will add a third and detailed step developers must go through before building.

A project will have to rate higher than others on a points system before approved and council will limit each developer to an 80 unit maximum each year.

The plan will mandate that developers meet energy, water, and noise conservation standards, as well as be below a city-set level of traffic congestion.

It will be through the "incentive points system" that one developer will be able to race ahead of another.

A maximum of 35 points will be available to developers ranking high in environmental concerns such as design, extra energy conservation options and good traffic circulation. Another 35 points will be available to those wishing to build in areas which will benefit the city.

Encouraging "in-filling" of vacant lots and the completion of roads and sewer lines is one of the main reasons for behind the plan. Thus, developers who own land in areas the city would like to see built up will be automatically one step ahead of competitors.

Builders will be eligible for up to 15 points for contributing up to $25 to the city's capital improvement fund. That section was once deleted by council and called "subtle blackmail." Thursday, council reinstated the section by a 4-1 vote. Mayor Bob Philcox dissented.

And the plan greatly encourages the development of low income housing. Apartment builders can receive up to 15 points for reserving 5, 10 or 15 percent of their units for low-income families. Developers of either apartments or homes can receive up to 10 points for contributing cash, a maximum of $400 per dwelling unit, to a special fund set aside for low income housing.

Additionally, the city will set aside 10 percent of sewage capacity each year to be allocated to builders of low income housing. With so few sewage connections being allocated annually, developers may find it to their benefit to build for families with less money.

The plan covers the southern portion of town served by the Sunol sewage plant and the northern section served by the Dublin, San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) plant.

Approximately 2.3 million gallons of sewage capacity will be set aside for the Sunol section. Council must give a minimum of 25 percent of the allocations made in a given year to each district, assuring that both sections of town get to develop a little each year.

Although similar growth plans have been upheld in the courts, Pleasanton officials expect developers serviced by DSRSD to file law suits. Those developers are guaranteed sewage capacity by a 1972 out-of-court agreement.

That agreement set up a priority list which the growth plan won't change, but the plan will force developers on each priority schedule to compete among themselves and doesn't guarantee that any "bad" project will be approved.

Council hopes to adopt the ordinance before Mayor Philcox and member Joyce LeClaire end their terms in March.

Other recommendations included storing a year's supply of food, candles, clothing, toilet paper plus other necessities. He suggested getting yourself and your money out of big cities.

"Move to towns with a population under 100,000," he added. "And get out of debt by all means."

He added that if a person was unable to move out of a city and was stuck in an apartment, there are ways to raise food.

"Enough food can be produced in a 15 square foot window box to partially fill the needs of a family of three or four."

Another way Target reports their studies is through nationwide discussion groups. There are 237 such groups now with a waiting list of 300 wanting to start as soon as group leaders are found, Jeffers explained.

Ruff states in his newsletter, "The Ruff Times," that he "has no financial interest in any of the companies whose services or products he recommends, except for books, tapes, letters published by Target Publishers, Inc. Neither he nor his family receive any commissions, rebates, finder fees or financial benefits of any kind, directly or indirectly, now or in the future, from such recommendations."

Education

Tuition aid battle looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — An election year battle awaits a proposal by the Senate Finance Committee to give a direct tax credit to parents of college and private school students.

The committee on Thursday approved the measure to aid middle-income parents and those with children in parochial schools. But the Carter administration instead wants expanded government grants based on need.

The Senate panel acted only hours after the Senate Human Resources subcommittee on education approved the expanded grant program much as President Carter had proposed.

The two plans have three major differences: — The tax credits would be available to rich, poor and middle-income groups alike; the grants would go only to families earning $25,000 or less.

— The tax credits would require no special application; the grants would require an application and a show of need.

— The tax credits could be used to offset tuition costs at the college, high school or grammar school level; the grants would cover only college costs.

Two sponsors of the tax credit, Sens. William V. Roth, R-Del., and Bob Packwood, R-Ore., hailed the finance committee vote as a message to Carter and the House that the credit is the proper way to provide low- and middle-income Americans some relief from rising education costs.

Under the tax credit bill, a self-supporting, full-time vocational or college undergraduate student could reduce his 1978 federal income tax by 50 percent of the first $500 of tuition and fees paid for the 1978-1979 school year. The credit would go to the parents if they support the student. On Aug. 1, 1980, the credit would rise to half the first $1,000 of tuition and fees and become available to offset tuition payments to elementary and secondary schools. On Aug. 1, 1981, the credit would be extended to graduate and part-time students.

The credit also would be available to those students or families who are so poor that they owe no income tax.

Because it seeks to aid parents of parochial school pupils, the proposed tax credit almost certainly would face a court test should it become law. Past efforts to enact a tuition tax credit have been blocked by House Democrats viewing the system as complicated and wasteful because it is not based on need. Those same arguments are used by the Carter administration. Carter's alternative, as approved in subcommittee, would tailor grants more closely to need. For example, the student from a typical four-member $15,000 family would get $1,020 while a student from a $25,000 family would get only $250.

Kindergarten signup set

Kindergarten registration in the Murray School District for the school year 1978-79 will begin Monday, April 3.

Parents are encouraged to enroll their child during the week of April 3-7 as this will help with the planning of next year's staff needs. A child is eligible for registration if he/she will be five years old on or before Dec. 2, 1978.

Verification of a child's age, either through a birth certificate or other appropriate evidence, is required by State law and should be brought at the time of registration. In addition, the Child Health and Disability Prevention Program recommends that a complete medical be reported at the time of kindergarten entry. State law requires that immunization for DPT (diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus) polio, and measles (10 day, reboola) must be completed prior to entering into kindergarten.

In addition, immunizations are also required for mumps and rubella (3-day measles). Appropriate information and forms will be available to parents to meet these legal requirements.

Parents may register at the school office between the hours of 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Fallon plans auction

Fallon Elementary School PTA is sponsoring its third annual silent auction set for March 3 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Fallon's multi-purpose room.

Each year the response to the project by local merchants has increased, said Kathy Mayhood, auction coordinator. So far the PTA has more than 200 donations including gift certificates, free dinners from local restaurants, reporting equipment including an autographed Warriors basketball, and one of the hottest items for the kids' a life-size cardboard poster of Shaun Cassidy.

All items will be displayed the night of the auction with a bid sheet and the name of the participating merchant. Upon arrival people will be handed an instruction sheet and a complete list of all merchants who have supported the auction.

For more information, call Kathy Mayhood at 828-0128.

Register at Knox

Registration at John Knox Nursery School, a cooperative, nondenominational center for children, will take place March 2 from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the home of Angie Gianella, registration chairwoman, 7490 Flagstone Dr., Pleasanton.

The school operates at John Knox Presbyterian Church, 7421 Amarillo Road, Dublin. Monthly tuition is $19 for three-year-olds, who attend classes two days weekly. Tuition for four-year-olds is $25, and they will attend classes three times weekly.

For information about the school or registration, call 828-2887 or 462-5499.

How the budget goes together

PLEASANTON—The factors involved in putting together a school budget were explained here Saturday at a school finance workshop hosted by the Pleasanton Joint School District.

Budgets of the Amador and Pleasanton school districts are generated by the business services division directed by Doug Rose. But with Rose now serving as interim superintendent, additional budget planning responsibilities have been delegated to Dick Rogers, director of fiscal services, and Mike Ananos, director of buildings and grounds and transportation.

Because of the uncertainty provoked by the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative on the June ballot, former superintendent Bruce Newlin recommended that two budgets be worked-up for each district.

At the workshop open to the public Saturday, the board and business services leaders discussed potential sources of income for 1978-79, the expenditure budget, application of allocation formulae, program budgeting and coding, and computer-generated purchase orders and warrants.

Senate Bill 90 work sheets were also utilized to explain income and expenditure items and allocation formulas.

The Pleasanton budget for 1977-78 totaled $7,495,669 with slightly more than 80 per cent of that going to employee salaries and benefits.

Pleasanton budgeted $1.4 million of that total for certificated salaries to cover not only classroom teachers but administrators, supervisors, librarians, guidance, welfare, physical and mental health personnel pay.

Classified salaries amounted to $1 million and covers instructional aides, clerical, maintenance, operations, food service, transportation, and "other" classified salaries.

Employee benefits totaled $982,003.

The major portion of the school district's income is from local taxes. $2.4 million secured and $1.3 million areawide, and state basic and equalization aid, amounting to $2.5 million for the current school year.

In addition to the complication stirred by Jarvis-Gann, the district is eyeing projected enrollment declines for the next three years, which could result in the loss of substantial average daily attendance (ADA) monies.

Dr. David Carlisle, director of research and development, has projected an enrollment drop of 960 students over the next three years.

Home study offered

DUBLIN — Free home study courses are offered at the Dublin Public Library and other area libraries in cooperation with Chabot College in Hayward.

The college developed a special 14-course series of independent study courses to help meet the needs of community members unable to attend the campus in person.

There is no cost to members of the Chabot College district who qualify as California residents. However, there is a charge for necessary textbooks.

Chabot College representatives are available at participating libraries each week at a regularly scheduled time during the quarter. Mary Baker comes to Dublin Public Library on Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

She and other college representatives accept sign ups, sell books, administer exercises and tests and answer questions.

Course work is done at home using specially designed self-study materials. Students visit their participating library whenever they need assistance. Questions can be referred to a subject matter specialist when necessary.

Credit is given when all required course work is completed. Three quarters are offered each year.

Courses offered are Punctuation, Intro. to Chess, Home Decoration, Home Nutrition, Managing Your Money and Math for Business.

Also, Beginning Bookkeeping, Law of Contracts,

Rhonda Baughn, a partially deaf kindergarten teacher at Livermore's Christensen School, receives personalized classroom support from hearing specialist Susan Coffin as part of the county and nationwide "Search and Serve" program for handicapped students. Six now, Rhonda's hearing problem was diagnosed as a 4-year-old and she has had county programs since then to improve her speech and vocabulary and allow her to attend regular classes at Christensen. Similar programs exist for students with visual and orthopedic handicaps and the ultimate goal of Search and Serve is to provide assistance from birth to age 21 for students with any type of physical or emotional disability. Parents or students wanting more information or help from Search and Serve should contact their public school district.

Search and serve

Law of Sales, Negotiable Instruments, A & B Understanding Weather, Business Letter Writing and Review of Basic Math.

Some courses use recorded lessons that are available at the cooperating library.

Registrations are accepted any time during the quarter. However, prospective students must register during the enrollment period in order to receive credit for the current quarter. Credit will be awarded at the end of the following quarter for those who sign up after the enrollment period.

There are quarters in autumn, winter and spring. Baker said she had 194 students this quarter throughout participating libraries.

Her contact schedule includes libraries in Dublin, Livermore, Castro Valley and Pleasanton, Union City and San Leandro libraries also participate in the program.

School loves ballplayer

LINDSAY (AP) — The students' clothing and the paint on the doors were Dodger blue Friday as the junior high school here was named after Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey.

Garvey's footprint was impressed in a block of cement painted blue in front of the school. Naturally, Dodgers is the school's new emblem.

The library was named after Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda and the counseling center after Garvey's wife, Cindy.

The school was named for Garvey, who isn't even from this Central California community, because he offers a clean image for youngsters to emulate, said Principal Bob Edwards.

The school once was named Lincoln Junior High, but school officials wanted a living example, Edwards said.

"I can't be anything but excited," Garvey said, "because anytime you're around a group of students who are trying to make themselves better and their school better, you just have to be pulling for them."

Garvey said he questioned the honor at first but decided his image would benefit students "because I feel I'm the same guy today as I was five years ago or will be 15 years from now." He told the students the three most important things in life are belief in God, family and "treating each other like we'd like to be treated. "It's tough to live together in this country, but I think if you work on those three objectives, it makes it a lot easier," Garvey said.

Campaign

The Livermore candidates talk

LIVERMORE — An attentive group of about 90 people heard the nine city council candidates discuss the Jarvis amendment, cease and desist order, budget and the elected mayor issues during Thursday's League of Women Voters candidates' night.

The candidates, with Bob Weissel absent, gave short introductory speeches and answered questions from the audience. Each candidate had one minute to respond to a question.

Drawing from their previous campaign talks, the candidates repeated their stands on the Jarvis issue. Reaction ranged from resigned acceptance — "It's going to pass whether we like it or not," echoed David Eller and Gurnam Sidhu, "We have to work to prepare for its effects" — enthusiastic support from Jerome Wilverding and tentative support from Marlin Ebert.

Incumbents Dale Turner, Helen Tirsell and John Staley were opposed to the amendment, with Staley pointing out that it really is a "fraud" since most of the tax money comes from big businesses who don't sell that often. If they never sell, Staley said, their tax rate will remain at the lower 1975-76 level while homeowners who sell and buy again will take a higher tax rate each time.

David Woods and Terrence Fox also opposed the amendment, mainly because of its concept. Fox felt it needed more study and should be worded better.

The pipeline issue brought out responses from most candidates, with Sidhu opposing the route of the proposed pipeline, Eller opposing the statements that the state "mandated" a pipeline be built. Ebert felt the biggest problem was "the subject has not been succinctly spelled out to the public, it has not been explained carefully." The incumbents defended the action as being the best they could do given the facts and the circumstances.

Wilverding got a laugh from the audience when he responded to a question about what to do with the two golf courses if his proposal of cutting back the budget by getting out of a business that competes with private enterprise. "Maybe we could grow hay," he replied with a smile.

Anjo shoots back

Pleasanton city council candidate Oliver Anjo issued a release Friday responding to charges made by opponent Stan Kephart and raising a few allegations of his own.

Anjo said Kephart's acceptance of $490 to his campaign from the firefighters union here "would be considered unethical and a moral conflict of interest...to most of the voters in this community" because firefighters are employees of the city.

Anjo also said that all the candidates support the police and fire departments and questioned if "this contribution was possibly arranged through the intercession of other city officials."

The candidate said he will rest on his record opposing the controversial sewage export pipeline. Kephart supports the pipeline, calling it the only way to solve the valley's sewage disposal problem. Anjo, however, supports using the effluent to irrigate city fields and parkland.

In a previous Times article, Kephart attacked Anjo's stand against Tennis Faire, which Anjo says competes with private business.

Jaycees sponsor night

The Pleasanton Jaycees will sponsor a candidate's night Wednesday, March 1, at the Val Vista Recreation Center. No host cocktails begin at 7:30 and candidates for the two council seats open March 7 will be available to talk with voters at 8 p.m. Questions concerning the event can be answered by Pat Geary at 846-7974 evenings.

League studies government

The League of Women Voters will conduct local study units on local government issues beginning Feb. 28 with a session on "Livermore City Finances."

The group will gather from 1 to 3 p.m. For location and directions, call Bonnie at 443-4585.

On March 1, the League will meet again for the second city finances session, to be held from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at 530 Zircon Way, Livermore.

On March 3, the League's local study units will meet concerning Pleasanton's General Plan, at a gathering to be held at 9 a.m. at 3827 Runnymede, Pleasanton.

For information or child care, call Bonnie at 443-4585 or Karen at 462-3295.

PG&E request

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For the first time in more than seven years, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. wants to reduce its electric rates and cut the average residential customer's monthly bill by about 45 cents.

In a formal request to the state Public Utilities Commission Thursday, PG&E asked to reduce rates by $98.3 million a year, effective April 1.

Bills should come down, the utility said, because the end to the state's drought has improved hydroelectric conditions and halted the need for more expensive alternate fuels.

PG&E said the proposed reduction was to be the first of a three-stage decrease that will slash charges to customers by nearly $400 million by October 1. If all goes as planned, the typical ratepayer's bill would fall by about $1.40 this fall, PG&E said.

New drive for path on Foothill

PLEASANTON — A drive begun by one woman is snowballing and will likely end up in the city's lap this week.

Jo Ann Zabik began circulating petitions urging the city to put a bike path on Foothill Road a week ago — one day after she witnessed an accident involving a teen on a bicycle and a motorist.

Thursday, Feb. 16, 17 year old Erwin Karatzer ran into a car, was taken to Valley Memorial Hospital, treated and released. The accident, Zabik says might not have happened if there was a bike path on Foothill for students leaving Foothill high school to use.

Zabik and her neighbor have gathered 300 signatures thus far and hope to collect 500 to dump on director of engineering services Don Sooby's lap this week.

This will be the second petition effort to get a bike path on the narrow, curving road bordering Pleasanton.

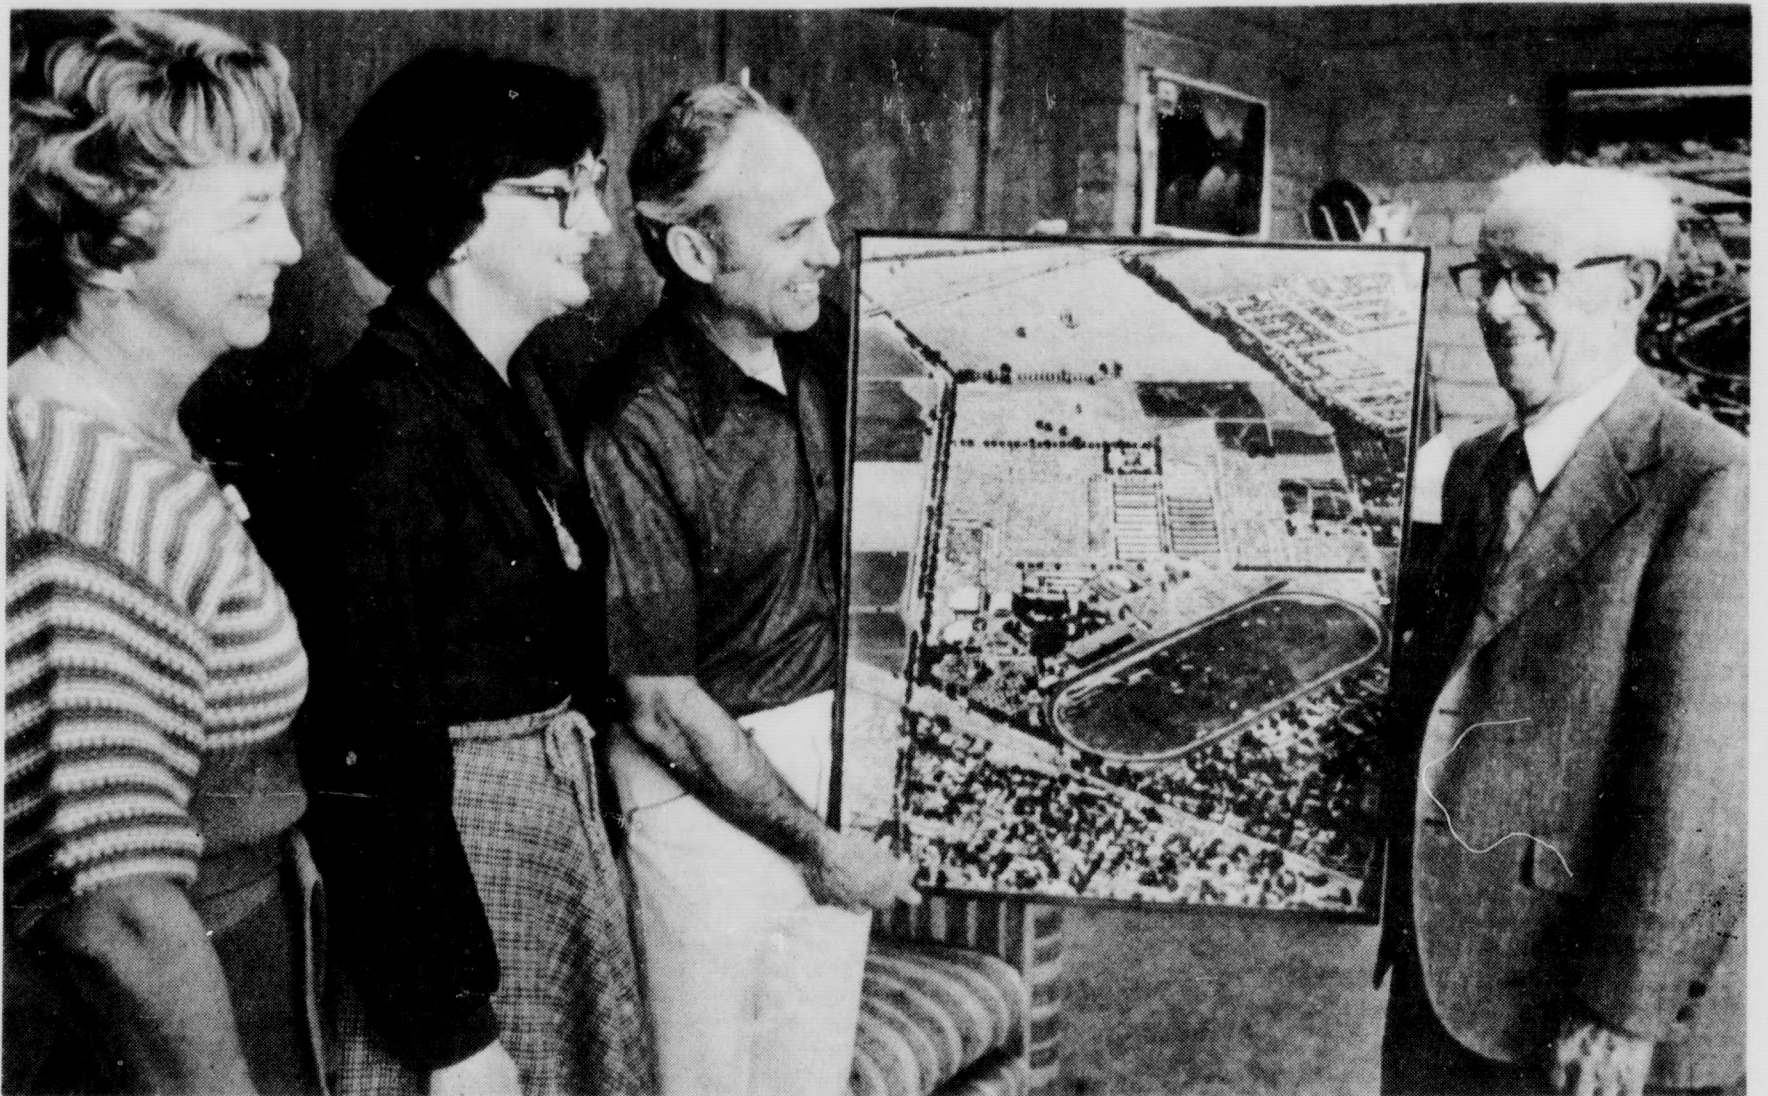

Two years ago a smaller petition was carried to the city. But the elected officials decided a two-way path, estimated to cost up to $100,000, would be too expensive. That figure came out of a combined county/city study because the long road lies in both jurisdictions.

"Let's just talk about the city side," says Zabik. "Why worry about what the county will or won't do." Zabik intends to make the bike path a campaign issue city council campaign issue here and push her effort until she gets a direct response from the current council. Foothill would be a particularly difficult road on which to add a bike lane, according to Sooby, who explains that the curves, hills and narrowness of the road would present engineering problems. It could be done, he quickly adds, but it would be expensive. The cost doesn't worry Zabik.

Carithers honored

Dale Carithers, right, a director of the Alameda County Fair Association for more than three decades until his resignation recently, was honored with a luncheon and presented with a favorite aerial photograph (showing the Fairgrounds in Pleasanton) Thursday. Present for the occasion were, from left, Patricia Mann and Pat Watchmaker of the Fair Association office staff, and Pete Bailey, assistant manager. A nationally-known authority on cattle, Carithers has gained numerous honors including nomination to the Western Fairs Association's Hall of Fame. A rancher in the Mission San Jose-Sunol area for many years, Carithers now resides at Rossmoor.

Storm brews over new ambulance home

Company manager Bob Lee contemplates situation.

PLEASANTON — Planning commissioners have called a special meeting Monday to review two home occupation permit applications submitted by Tri-Cities Ambulance, Inc.

Residents of the Jensen tract off Santa Rita Road are already protesting the applications through letters and phone calls to commissioners and staff.

The ambulance company, which left Pleasanton for Livermore last summer, wants to operate a three-member crew out of a home at either 4107 Nevis Street or 4195 Francisco Street.

Neighborhood complaints plagued the company during two application hearings seven months ago and had previously caused one landlord to evict the crew from a Pleasanton house.

Planning staff is recommending commissioners approve a permit for the Francisco Street residence, subject to two primary conditions. Only one ambulance could be kept at the home at a time. The siren could not be turned on until the ambulance was on Santa Rita Road and out of the Jensen tract.

Ambulance response time has increased since the crew moved to a Livermore residence, causing city manager Clay Brown to warn the company that it is close to breaching its contract with the county.

Company manager Bob Lee claims his crew was forced out of Pleasanton and insists that they'd gladly move back to town if only they could find a place to live.

Commissioners will consider the permit applications tomorrow at 7 p.m. at 30 West Angela Street.

Day care study promised

OAKLAND — Alameda County's Commission on the Status of Women will survey the Valley's available subsidized child care services at the request of a Valley resident.

Vicki Goddard of Livermore asked the commission to make the survey because she feels that single mothers on low incomes are at a disadvantage in the Valley.

There are only two child care centers which take children from lower income families, she told the commission in a letter.

One of them, said CSW staff person Kate Quick, is at Leahy Square. It has day care places for 26 children, 12 of which are low-income.

Most private day care places charge in the range of $115 to $160 per month for one child, said Quick. publicly subsidized slots in day care centers charge on a sliding scale from free to very little all the way up to nearly full rate, depending on the family income and number of dependents.

Quick said that the divorce rate in the Valley has increased "tremendously and there is a real need for additional or low cost child day care for working mothers." She said that's been the indications she has heard at workshops and panel discussions involving Valley women, too.

CSW's survey will deal mainly with numbers: how much need, how many slots are open for children, what are the costs.

Any subsequent survey that might be done, if there is time and interest, might focus on the quality of day care available, said Quick.

Day care centers mean that children are there all day, often from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. while the mother works. It should be more than just babysitting with a TV set; it should involve real caring and a stimulating program for the youngsters, said Quick. Unfortunately that doesn't always happen with every day care center, she said.

Livermore man's Oriental view

Culture, artistry of Japanese tea ceremony

What may seem like a dainty art, the Japanese Tea Ceremony, goes back 400 years to the fierce Samurai warriors, says Steve Sesko, an expert on Japanese sociology and a tea ceremony hobbyist, who demonstrated the art recently in Livermore, for the Unitarian Fellowship.

Tea drinking began, says Steve, with the priests of Zen monasteries of Japan, who adopted the practice to enable the priests to stay awake during meditation. The ceremony surrounding the tea drinking slowly evolved and became the property of the Samurai military rulers after the faster

The concepts of the ceremony are rusticity, poverty and simple elegance, says Sesko.

Sen-No-Rikyu, in 1560, developed the tea ceremony into its final form, existing today.

Steve Sesko became enamoured with the art during a one year Rotary International Fellowship research for a Master's critique in Japan, and during his subsequent residence in the country, as he worked at various jobs as a teacher of English and translator of brokerage reports into English.

He is working at Livermore Library until he returns to Japan to prepare documents and copyrights for an American company, and to train buyers and sellers concerning Japanese culture.

The whole idea of the Tea Ceremony, says Steve, is simply the making and serving of a cup of tea, but it's how it's made, the quality of the tea, certain utensils used, and the form and style of the Tea Master, as well as the compatibility of the guests, and certain concepts that are necessary, which make it the highly ritualized form of relaxation which it is regarded today.

The concepts which govern the tea service, says Steve, are rusticity, a closeness to nature, as expressed by having the tea house situated in a garden, poverty, and simple elegance.

There are thousands of stories about the tea ceremony, explains Steve, which demonstrate the concepts. One of his favorites follows:

It seems that Hideyoshi, powerful Samurai governor, was walking by the garden of Sen-No-Rikyu one day, and he noticed the garden was in full bloom with morning glories.

So he sent a messenger to Sen-No-Rikyu that he would arrive on a certain day for flower viewing and tea service.

This quiet, elegant ceremony was practiced by fierce Samurai warriors, according to Steve Sesko, who recently returned from Japan after years of study and work.

However, when Hideyoshi arrived, he saw that all the flowers were gone from the garden, and he became absolutely furious. He was about to have Sen-No-Rikyu commit suicide for insulting him, but since he was his favorite tea master, he decided to give him a chance to explain.

Hideyoshi entered the tea room, and noticed in the alcove there was a small vase with one morning glory, the most perfect morning glory of all floating in it.

Sen-No-Rikyu was allowed to live because the concepts of poverty and simple elegance, required for the tea ceremony, had been fulfilled. A whole garden of morning glories would have been ostentatious.

The tea service was taught as part of the Samurai ideals, and was for men only. These ideals were in two parts: Bu, the arts of war, including Judo, and other martial arts, sword fighting. Bun, the arts of culture, included poetry writing, Japanese dance, flower arrangement, brush writing, and manners and court ritual, as well as the tea ceremony. The higher the rank of the Samurai, the better they were expected to be at all of these arts.

Sesko's study of the ceremony goes back five years.

The Tea Ceremony, in its complete form, to take four hours, would be in four parts. The first part is a simple meal, or Kaiseki. This part, which is served for the Emperor or Empress, requires that the host invite either three or five guests, never four, which is an unlucky number in Japan, due to the fact that the kanji, or character for four and for death are the same word: Shi.

The Kaiseki consists of one fresh dish, one baked dish, one boiled dish, and one broiled dish, all in very small servings, and Japanese Sake, rice wine.

The way the guests enter and leave the room, the way the rice bowls and utensils are handled, are all completely prescribed in the Tea Ceremony.

At the end of the Kaiseki, the meal portion, the guests leave the room while the hosts prepare the room for the next part, the making of thick tea. The host strikes a gong when he wishes the guests to return. The guests walk in and also sit in a prescribed manner. (There is a chief guest who performs certain functions.)

There is a brazier in a certain part of the room for heating water. The host prepares a thick tea from a green powdered tea, using the utensils, made from bamboo and ceramic, in a certain manner. Every movement is pre-conceived. All sample the thick tea, and discuss the utensils and what bowl he made it in. The guests again leave the room. All drink from the same bowl. The hand-made ceramic bowl Steve Sesko prepared thick tea in had a hand-painted heron in white, against a rusty red background. It evoked comment from this guest.

The third portion of the Tea Ceremony is the most commonly used variation, the one commonly thought of as the tea ceremony.

To prepare for it, the host and the guests replenish the charcoal fire, so that it will be hot for the thin tea. Another variation at this point might be that they make a small flower arrangement for the alcove, or they might play little games. Then the guest stay, and the hosts go out.

The fourth part of the ceremony consists of the making of thin tea, done in a prescribed manner. This is the part of the ceremony that has been seen by tourists for 100 years in the temples around Kyoto, and which is held in all the big hotels in Japan.

The Tea Ceremony is a good way to understand Japan, to learn more Japanese culture, Sesko says.

For Westerners, says Steve, "It can be a very peaceful and quiet experience," he explains.

But meditating is not the object. Just the opposite is true, the object being to concentrate on each movement, on how the tea is made, to observe the colors of the lacquer ware, and the shape of different utensils, the taste of the tea, and the many details of the ceremony which fulfill the concepts of poverty, simple elegance, and rusticity.

Steve Sesko, scholar and Japanese social scientist, will return to Japan in April, but because of his appreciation for an ancient, ritualized art, he has brought an enriching experience, the many subtle pleasures of the Japanese Tea Ceremony to the Valley to share with us.

Jaycees helping seniors

The Livermore Jaycees and the Voice of the Valley have combined forces to present another senior home repair project. Both clubs have in the past tried to help seniors in need of repairs around their houses.

Because of the rain and high winds, the Jaycees feel there may be many repairs needed. Any senior who could use help in home repairs can reach the Jaycees and Voice of the Valley for help by calling the Senior Service Center at 443-1150.

The center will screen calls for help, prepare a list and estimate work hours needed. Repairs should start in March.

Valley Memorial seeks volunteers to help out

Got some extra time on your hands now that the kids are in school — or you've retired?

Or, are you a high school student interested in a health career?

Valley Memorial Hospital is seeking volunteers to help out in their Thrift Shop, Gift Shop, Family Medical Center and Information and Reception Deck.

Both men and women are needed to fill vacancies.

Dublin residents could work at the Family Medical Center in Dublin.

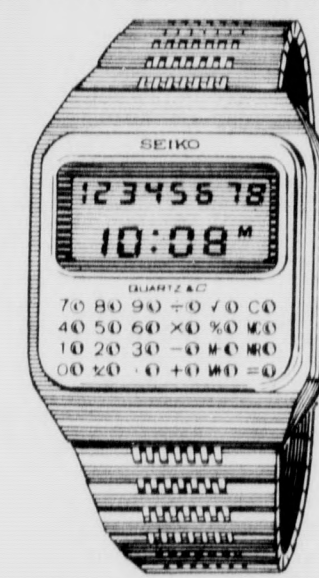

High school students who will be graduating this year are encouraged to apply for the Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary Scholarship, available to those interested in pursuing a health career. For scholarship information, call Lynn Kahler, scholarship chairwoman, at 828-1828.

For more information on volunteer jobs and duties at the hospital, call the Auxiliary Office at 447-7399 or call Mary Curdy at 846-5465.

Valley photographer tells of adventures

LIVERMORE — To compress Gordon Clark into a short newspaper feature story doesn't do him justice.

He comes from a long line of Pacific Northwest storytellers and his long interview with this reporter tied the previous record held by another great talker, nuclear energy critic John Gofman.

First the bare facts, then the stories.

Clark is teaching a course in the "semantics of photography", 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. next Tuesday and the following two Thursdays at Granada High School, Room 205, sponsored by Chabot College. Now for the interesting stuff.

There was the time around 1970 that Clark decided to build a reputation as a magazine photojournalist. He figured he had to cover a war because it was the only thing that grabs the attention of jaded magazine photo editors in New York.

But the Vietnam war was being overcovered, so why not the Middle East? Nobody ever goes there. Or understands it.

Clark wound up in Lebanon with $250 in his pocket and subsistence job with an Arab press agency. He saw the preliminary bouts for the eventual civil war there.

Where else could you get real, live 40 millimeter cannon shells roaring past your hotel room? A lot of gee-whiz for those fat, sleeve-rolling, cigar smokers at their New York desks.

Gordon got right out on the balcony and registered the pretty tracer bullets carving up the night air.

The only danger was one round that demolished the room two doors down the hall, but that was at least 50 feet away. Oh, and some moron across the street regularly raked the hotel lobby with .50 calibre machinegun fire. "You just walked real fast across the lobby."

Then it was off to Syria for a short trip, telling border guards that he was a rich student with four cameras because the guards had instructions to bar all photographers from Syria's secret war against Jordan.

The Syrians confiscated two rolls of film from Gordon after he shot photos of PLO guerillas driving a captured Jordanian tank around Syria. He pulled the oldest one in the book, though, and hid the real rolls in his underwear. Journalists will do anything to smuggle out the truth.

New York was impressed and it was off to the free-lance big time with assignments from Newsweek, Time and the New York Times Sunday Magazine.

The road to fame began with a simple box camera under the Christmas tree when Gordon was 16. He wanted it to photograph submarines near his Pacific Northwest home.

Soon he forgot about the submarines and jumped feet first into photography.

There was a strong family influence. His grandfather, much admired by Gordon's father and two uncles, was an amateur photographer and brilliant storyteller. He infused two loves in his sons: working with the hands (he was a blacksmith) and with the imagination.

"I think I've captured that with what I do, working with the mechanics of camera and the sensitivity of photographic vision."

One of the proudest moments of Gordon's life came when his father put some of Gordon's photographs on the wall next to his grandfather's work.

In his photography, Clark tries to make the subject matter clear enough so the viewer is not puzzled. "The story should be very simple, though not simple-minded, and should include a bit of mystery," he said.

"The best storytellers do that. They take the facts, but they throw in a little more to give you the whole truth."

His wife, Mabel, thinks Gordon is good at photography because he works very hard and has extremely high standards. "Other photographers cook Kraft Macaroni Dinners. Gordon is a gourmet cook." She was speaking both literally and metaphorically.

Hired in 1973 to revamp the Tri-Valley Herald's photographic setup, Clark feels he succeeded at and that the results also improved photography at the other two Valley papers.

But the battle between photographers and editors continues, he noted.

"Papers should drop ribbon cutting and plaque presentation pictures. They are not news events, but manufactured. Editors should start thinking in visual terms so that they assign photographers to tell stories that either complement word stories or tell a story that can't be done in words."

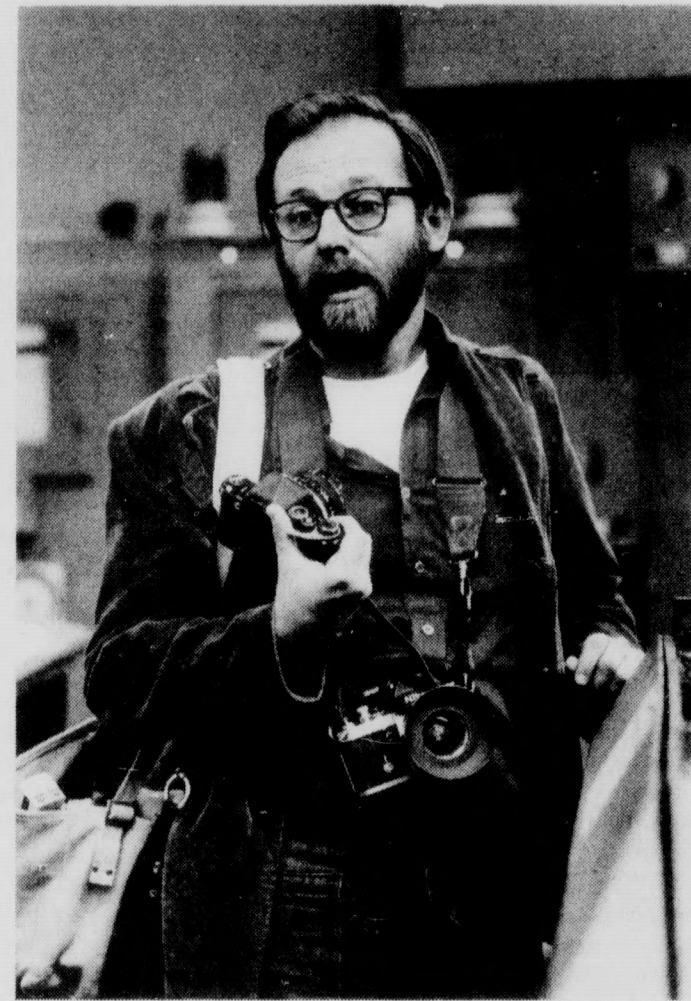

"Photos should say something, not just fill space. I'd like to see fewer pictures, but have those few used better."

"A writer will spend an hour or two (it was three in our case) interviewing me, but a photographer will drop in and have only 10 minutes to get to know me and then show readers what I do."

He considers himself a 'street person' and close to the street people, so I photographed him in the middle of Castro Street. The Times didn't use this shot, but I like it, and I'm trying to free lance an article on him."

Citizen spurs voter drive

LIVERMORE — Her smile is contagious. And her enthusiasm makes even the most reluctant, harried shopper pause to hear her comments.

Georgia Van pohre paces in front of Safeway-Long's and the Lucky at Granada

Shopping Center wearing a colorful placard urging everyone to vote.

She hands out a mimeographed information sheet on city council challengers. "But not the incumbents," says the vivacious citizen. "I really feel people know enough about their background already."

She could be called the "good news lady," since all her descriptions of the challengers are positive.

But her big message is to vote, no matter for whom you're voting. "I'm really concerned that people allow local elections to just go by with little thought. Their voices are never heard unless they vote," she says earnestly.

And that's the message she gives each shopper. "Are you voting on March 7? Well, by all means, do," she exclaims. And if she encounters a visitor to the city, she gives them a cheerful, "Glad to have you in our town."

A statement from her information sheet best sums up her feelings: "Selecting a candidate is each person's privilege and duty as a citizen. May the best person win and their performance be an outstanding reward for the electorate."

Alameda County air rapped by EPA as sub standard

Leshner News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Most of the Bay Area is in violation of federal air pollution standards, the Environmental Protection Agency announced last week, formally confirming what local pollution officials have known for some time.

Napa County Supervisor Sam Chapman, chairman of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District's board of directors, said the announcement may spur the adoption of a controversial air quality plan being developed by regional government.

The EPA study, based on locally compiled statistics, said that the entire nine-county Bay Area violates standards set for smog—the photochemical oxidants that obscure vision, and irritates eyes.

It also said that every county is over the limit in carbon monoxide, which can lead to stress in the heart and blood vessels.

But the report also concluded that the region is within safe limits of sulfur dioxide, which comes from oil burning industries, and nitrous oxides, which primarily come from auto exhausts. (Tighter emission controls specifically aimed at reducing nitrous oxide output from cars were begun in 1971.)

The report also concluded that Alameda County violates "primary" standards of particulate pollution—dust, smoke, mist, ash and fumes—endangering residents' health.

Alameda was the only county to contain that high a level of particulates, according to the report.

Other Bay Area counties, including Contra Costa, only violated "secondary" standards of particulate pollution, which the EPA said could cause damage to locally grown crops and other vegetation.

And, the study noted, the highest concentrations of smog are likely to be found in high-density industrial zones like Contra Costa, Alameda and Santa Clara counties.

The EPA study was released at a significant time, when the Association of Bay Area Governments is in the midst of developing a regional master plan aimed at cleaning up the air over the next 25 years.

Much of that plan has stirred vigorous opposition from local governments, even prompting Marin County to withdraw from ABAG last week in protest.

But Napa County Supervisor Sam Chapman hailed the EPA report as a catalyst for getting the regional air plan adopted by this June.

"Now that this important plan is in its final draft stage," said Chapman, "we hope the EPA announcement—confirming what we already knew—will help rally public support for the measures necessary to roll back air pollution levels in the Bay Area."

"This is essentially serving notice on everyone that they have to adopt their plans to provide for attainment (of federal pollution standards)," said pollution district spokesman Ted McHugh.

EPA gave ABAG $4.5 million two years ago to develop the air plan, as well as long-term plans for water quality wupply and management, and solid waste management.

Under federal amendments to the Clean Air Act in 1977, every state in the union must submit such long-range clean air plans to the EPA by January 1979.

ABAG's locally developed plan will be melded into the state-wide plan when it is completed and if it is adopted.

Those plans should show that all areas in the county can meet federal air pollution standards by the year 1982. But if it can be shown that is impossible to do in certain areas the EPA will grant a five-year extension to meet those goals.

Pollution officials indicated that the EPA's air study might show that the Bay Area should be given such an extension.

The worst areas for air pollution, according to the study, are Chicago, Los Angeles-Long Beach, and Aurora-Elgin, Ill., where standards in all five categories are chronically violated.

Even though the Bay Area violates some standards, the study noted that there has been a general decline in air pollution over the past decade.

EPA Administrator Douglas Costle said that since 1970, sulfur dioxide air pollution nationally has dropped 27 percent, carbon monoxide levels are down 20 percent, and particulates decreased 12 percent.

"We still have many specific areas of the country—especially in our cities—where a significant clean-up task remains," he said.

East Bay senator pushes bill to protect California bobcats

Senator John Holmdahl (D-Alameda County) has introduced a bill to protect bobcats in California.

"The need for this protection was brought to my attention by many persons concerned about the needless trapping and shooting of bobcats for fur coats and just the fun of killing them," Holmdahl said.

"I believe that most Californians regard the practice of trapping bobcats in painful traps to provide luxury fur coats a repugnant practice," he said.

Bobcats, the smallest of wild North American cats, are helpful predators which control rodents that are harmful to agricultural crops. They cannot overpopulate due to their limited food supply, territory, and low reproductive rate.

Protection given most other species of spotted cats has caused furriers to turn to bobcat pelts as an alternative. As a result, bobcat pelts have jumped in price by as much as 400 percent, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Citing prices as high as $350 per pelt, the Fish and Wildlife Service has reported that the species is overharvested in many states and is declining in number as a result.

In January, the state Fish and Game Commission rejected an appeal to prohibit bobcat fur trapping and instead set a limit of 6,000 pelts for export, 500 more than were exported last year.

Bobcats in California may be pursued with dogs and there is no restriction on killing pregnant or immature cats. There is no estimate on the number of bobcats killed in the state each year but a decrease in the bobcat population since 1971 has been reported.

"Bobcats are not killed for food or any essential purpose," said Holmdahl. "This valuable and interesting species should be protected before it is too late," he said.

The bill is Senate Bill 1581.

Rank and file vote near

Tentative coal workers' pact terms drawn

By The Associated Press
While many of the nation's utilities, their coal stockpiles dwindling, warned their customers against relaxing conservation measures, striking United Mine Workers waited to learn the details of the negotiated settlement announced by President Carter.

The strike, the longest continuous nationwide coal strike, enters its 83rd day today. United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller urged the 166,000 striking union members Saturday to accept the contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, but said he would not campaign in the coalfields for ratification of the three-year contract, as he did in 1974. Many miners said they were reserving judgment until they had a chance to see the proposed contract in writing. The UMW ordered 220,000 copies of the contract printed. The rank and file will not vote until later this week, after the settlement is explained locally. Following UMW constitutional procedures, the ratification process is expected to take 10 days.

"I think everyone wants to see the strike end," said Michael Buntin of DuQuoin, Ill., a UMW subdistrict board member. "But the agreement is just going to have to be looked at." Officials of both utilities and states affected by the strike stressed that electricity conservation measures remained in effect. "The announcement (by Carter) does not change the situation in Indiana," said William J. Watt, energy adviser to Indiana Gov. Otis R. Bowen. About 3,500 workers across Indiana are on indefinite layoffs.

"For us the crisis is not over until we start getting coal again," said Robert Van Atta, a spokesman for West Penn Power Co. in western Pennsylvania. Nationwide, the Labor Department has said, about 67,000 factory workers were out of jobs last week as a result of the strike. The proposed contract would provide, among other things, a 37 percent pay hike which would give most miners an $80-a-day top salary by 1981. The proposed settlement announced Friday by Carter was based on a tentative agreement reached with a major independent, Pittsburgh & Midway Coal Mining Co., which operates six mines in Kentucky and Missouri. The UMW bargaining council endorsed the P&M agreement by a 25-13 vote earlier in the week as the pattern for an industry-

Social Security costs, efficiency probe asked

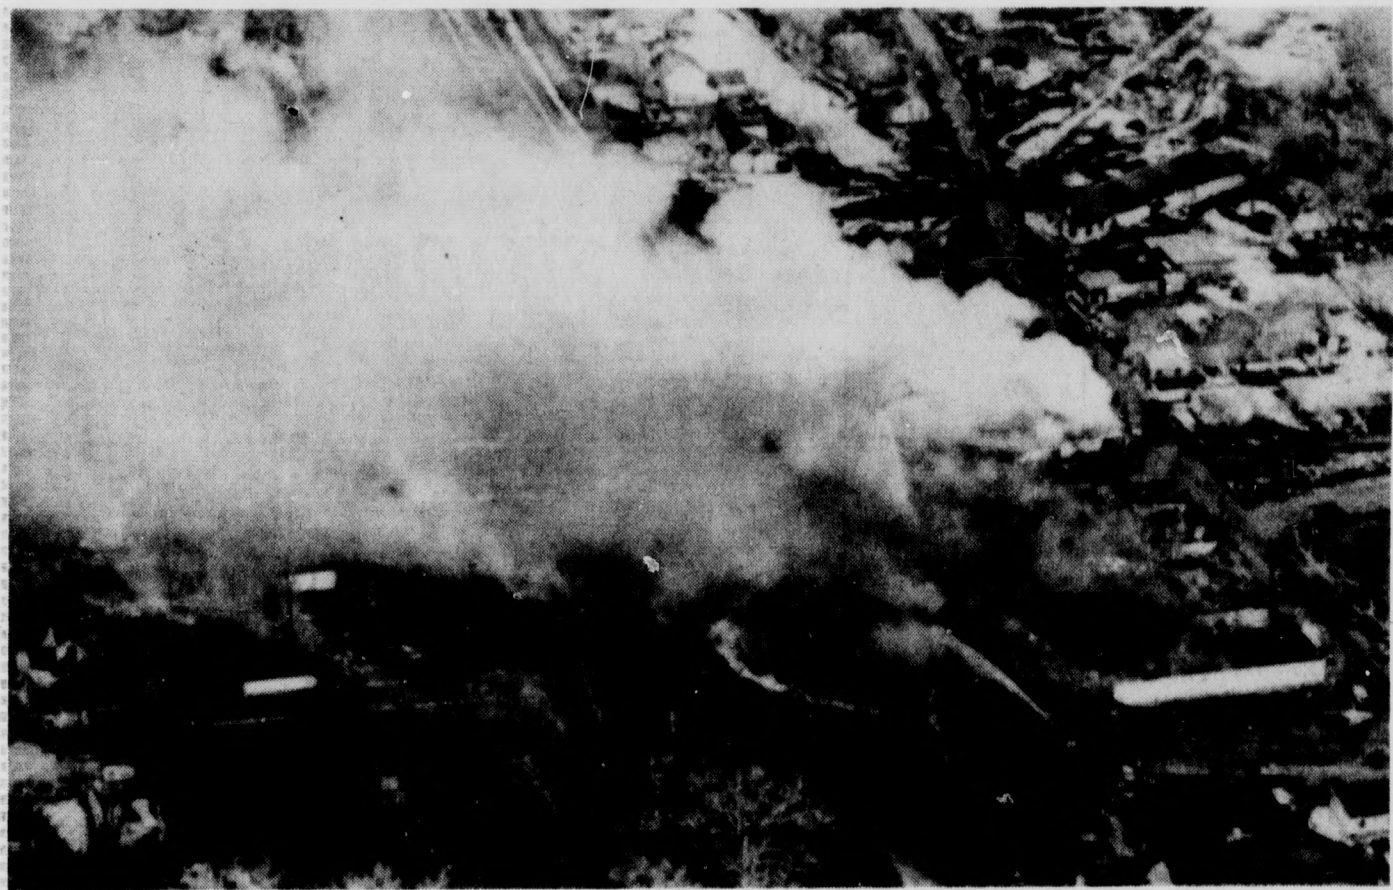

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outcry over Social Security tax increases reflects public demand for efficiency, not for abandoning the retirement trust fund, says the head of a panel that will review the entire Social Security program.

"I don't hear any noises to the effect that people want to abandon Social Security. They just want to get it functioning as efficiently as possible," said Stanford G. Ross, a private tax lawyer. "People want to know that they'll be getting what they're paying for."

On Saturday, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. named Ross, who worked with Califano in the Johnson White House a decade ago, as chairman of the new Advisory Council on Social Security. The independent, 13-member panel is required by law to review Social Security programs periodically, including the trust funds for Social Security's disability program and Medicare and the retirement fund.

The council will also look at such issues as the treatment of women and mandating that federal workers and other government employees join Social Security. Two months ago, Congress enacted a law that will raise Social Security taxes paid by workers and employers by $227 billion over the next decade to keep the program in the black. Without the infusion of tax funds, the system faced massive deficits. The new tax hikes don't start taking effect until next year, but there was a small jump this year from a previously scheduled increase. The tax rate rose to 6.05 percent from 5.85 percent on wages up to $17,700, for a maximum tax of $1,070. Last year, the maximum tax was $965 paid by those with incomes of $16,500 or more. The new law would raise the maximum tax to more than $3,000 on wages over $40,000 by 1987. The prospect of these increases touched off a public outcry and prompted congressional proposals aimed at softening the impact by using general tax revenue funds for some Social Security programs.

BART director miffed as train makes him late

Bob Allen, Bay Area Rapid Transit District Director from Livermore, might well wish to change the "Rapid" to "Un-pendable" after a recent experience. The Valley Republican who has declared himself a candidate for election from the 9th Congressional District was two minutes late in filing his nomination petition with the Alameda County Registrar of Voters last Thursday.

Allen blamed an unexplained slowdown of his feeder bus-BART journey to the County Courthouse for his dilemma. He arrived at Registrar James Riggs' office at 5:02 p.m. to present the petition bearing 1,085 signatures.

The filing fee is $575, according to Allen, and each verified signature would save him 19.2 cents or a total of $208 on the fee. He said Saturday night that it is now up to the county counsel to determine whether the petition can be accepted.

Allen hopes to unseat Rep. Don Edwards, a Democrat from San Jose.

Sen. Dole wants presidency

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas Saturday acknowledged to a group of Republicans that he wants to be president.

"I'm interested. What I've got to find out is if anybody is interested in me," he told the Associated Press. "The only way I can find that out is to dip my fingers in the water and see how it feels. And New Hampshire is a good place to make that test."

Dole, who last year was former President Gerald Ford's running mate against Carter, was speaking to the Republican State Committee.

Earlier Saturday in Washington, Dole announced the formation of a political action committee to aid Republican candidates for federal state and local office.

FBI joins
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The FBI has joined a police investigation of the attempted assassination of powerful San Francisco labor leader George Evans-Kovich. The 47-year-old official of Laborers Union Local 241 was reported in stable condition today at Presbyterian Hospital, where he was admitted for removal of a slug which entered his forehead and lodged in the sinus above his left eye. "He was very fortunate it was only a small .22," said police Lt. George Rosko. "Anything else would have done a lot more damage." The assailant attacked at dawn Thursday as Evans-Kovich entered the local's headquarters. In a trash can outside the building, officers found a .22 caliber pistol and a padded coat sleeve that apparently was used to muffle the sound of shots.

City councils

When voters in Pleasanton and Livermore go to the polls on March 7 to elect members to the city council, they will be reaffirming the peoples' confidence in our ability to govern ourselves at that level of government which is closest to the governed.

Because it is close, municipal government is often the most controversial, the bureaucracy upon which the people can dump all of their frustrations.

Regrettably, the ability of city hall to respond to those complaints is being hampered by the state and federal hierarchy, where much of the authority, the money and the politics now rest.

Today, municipal employees are unionized, department heads have civil rights, and the courts can overturn any local directive. It is a wonder that city councils are able to function at all.

But they do, and they have done so amazingly well, in this community throughout the years.

It is with that confidence in the future of "home rule" that The Times approaches its role in these upcoming elections. We believe the voters will accept their responsibility in this process with enthusiasm for their city, and for their elected representatives.

...in Pleasanton

Two candidates among the five challenging for Pleasanton city council have qualifications that make them odds-on favorites.

Walter Wood has served his community in almost every conceivable manner in the dozen years he has resided in Pleasanton... volunteer fireman, downtown booster, defender of the city's heritage and, currently, member of the planning commission.

It has, in Woods' summation, "amounted to 36 years of service in less than 12 years on the job." It has also been one man's non-stop dedication to the community and the people he so dearly loves.

Walter Wood should be every one's choice for the Pleasanton city council.

Stan Kephart is that other kind of Pleasantonite... in town less than five years, hard working father and provider, kids in soccer and all that. Kephart also has a grasp of city business that puts some of the veterans to shame.

Our one concern about Kephart's candidacy is that he comes from the same campaign stock (and the same campaign manager) as did Frank Brandes. We do not mean to put down Councilman Brandes (The Times endorsed him in 1976) but neither would the people be served by any hint of council members who function, and vote, in lockstep.

If Stan Kephart can serve as his own man — and we think he can — then he will make a solid member of the city's government.

We recommend Stan Kephart for Pleasanton city council.

...in Livermore

Among the nine candidates seeking three vacancies on the Livermore city council are a banker, an attorney and a housewife. We think those backgrounds, together with the optometrist and the physicist who are holdover council members, offer the widest possible representation of Livermore's electorate.

Helen Tirsell deserves a second term on the council because she believes in her community, fights for home rule, and is willing to give her time and her energy to the office.

As mayor of the city, Tirsell did not always earn the love of her constituents — particularly those who came to challenge her on a given Monday night — but she has gained the abiding respect of East Bay politicians for her rugged advocacy of Livermore's cause. On balance, we believe that is a good tradeoff for the local citizenry.

Dale Turner approaches city servitude from an entirely different route, and that is why he has been a necessary ingredient in the council's makeup. His businessman/banker philosophy is what Livermore needs right now to help get its own fiscal affairs in order. Turner is also prepared to challenge city hall when necessary, and that is a strength the people can always use.

John Staley is a three-year member of the council who is just now making his first bid for election to that post. Lacking the flamboyant nature of his peers, Staley brings a kind of quiet reasoning to city affairs which might otherwise be lost in that busy arena. His legal background is also a bonus for a deliberative body which must often test judicial waters.

Our recommendation for Livermore city council goes to Tirsell, Turner and Staley.

Terrance Fox is a fourth candidate who deserves attention because of his enthusiasm and his training. Even if he is unsuccessful this year, we hope Fox will be available in the 1980 council elections.

Two views on tax issue

Raps Raymond

Copy of a letter to Supervisor Valerie Raymond:

Noting your rather extensive comments regarding the Jarvis Amendment, as a home owner within your voting district I remind you that you were elected to represent this District...

You... failed to realize what made the Jarvis Amendment necessary in the first place. Had our elected representatives, you included, heeded the warning signs from the middle income taxpayer... this kind of extreme measure would not be necessary.

I am forty five years old and worked for years to get what I have finally achieved. One more tax raise and I cannot afford to keep what I worked for. So how dare you in fact threaten those like me with the closing of such things as Fairmont Hospital and fire stations and public libraries... In the four years I have lived in Pleasanton, I have seen no appreciable improvement in the Police or Fire Department, in the school system or our roads. No one I know uses Fairmont Hospital or Pleasanton and Dublin's sad facsimile of a Library. We all know that that is not where our money is going.

Your threats are not only poorly timed but very ill conceived: They demonstrate only too clearly that our elected officials have no notion or intention of ever trying to save a dollar... there are hundreds of places where you can save hundreds of thousands of dollars without closing hospitals. But that would require some thinking and imagination, two assets our elected officials seem to have lost. Perhaps without the perpetually growing money tree in your backyard, you will all begin to relearn the concept of fiscal responsibility, or we the electorate will find someone who will.

Tax tickery

Editor, The Times:

I hope people read and look beyond the words. Property Tax relief in the Jarvis-Gann Initiative; its misleading and tricky with words. Property tax relief is badly needed. But we as a community have some basic needs: Fire — Police — Recreation. The money for these items will have to come from somewhere. Jarvis-Gann initiative is a drastic step without a solution to acquire the needed funds to finance these services. I urge everyone to become more informed about the initiative and its consequences.

Vote No.

The week in retrospect

Four, forty & 'O'

Apparently some of the candidates for Livermore and Pleasanton city councils need to bone up on social concerns.

And perhaps most of the council candidates, incumbent and challenger alike, should realize that running a municipal government isn't limited to "pipelines."

Municipal government is supposed to be elected and paid officials helping people get the best police, fire, emergency, recreation, and utility services for their tax dollars.

What residents of Livermore and Pleasanton are "getting" now is not under question.

What we question is the responsiveness to and the knowledge of human or social services by the candidates.

Basis for this is last Wednesday's candidates night sponsored by Inter-Act at the Presbyterian Church in Pleasanton.

Inter-Act made two contacts well in advance with each candidate. Of the 15 candidates for the two councils, four showed up. The quartet included Edward Alves, Oliver Anjo and Stan Kephart of Pleasanton and John Staley of Livermore.

Livermore incumbent Dale Turner and Pleasanton challenger Walt Wood sent in written responses but the remaining nine responded either "no," mentioned a previous commitment or indicated "maybe" then didn't show.

News media coverage of the candidates efforts was zilch... which is not surprising given the level of alertness of the Valley media.

Forty persons attended the forum, not a bad number when you consider that school superintendent search "in-put" meetings draw as many as six or 12.

Inter-Act, formed recently as a coalition of 75 Valley social service agencies, asked candidates initially to respond to the following questions: What kind of role should local governments take in relation to human services? To what extent do you think revenue-sharing, community development and general fund monies should be used to fund human services?

Candidates were also asked questions by audience members.

We understand that some of the responses evidenced lack of knowledge of social concerns in the Valley, some drew snickers, and other questions had to be explained to the person valiantly attempting to respond.

Kephart of Pleasanton and Staley of Livermore apparently acquitted themselves quite well, though.

Several very pertinent questions were asked by audience members and we feel they should be repeated here in the hope that ALL the candidates will respond to them — hopefully to the electorate at a public forum.

One directed to Staley asked, "Why do you think revenue-sharing funds are better spent for capital improvements than service programs?"... which is rather "loaded" in the vein of "When will you stop beating your wife?"

Pleasanton candidates were asked, "What do you see as the function of the Human Services Commission?"

Another challenged candidates on their approach to human services, "What plans do you have for improving human services without spending great amounts of money?"

Intent of the latter question was to learn if candidates were aware of the number of agencies serving all communities of the Valley. Examples include the drug abuse, mental health and volunteer programs as well as Horizons, a youth services program headquartered in Livermore.

Letters to the Times

Former policeman

Editor, The Times:

After 9 years on the Oakland Police Department and 18 years with the Livermore Police Department, I have seen men come and go, due to disciplinary action taken against them for misconduct... But, this is the first time, that I have ever heard of such charges made against a police officer.

After reading letters, that, were sent into the newspapers... I was wondering if City Manager Parness was the suspect and Chief Lindgren the victim.

I realize that most of the good citizens meant well, and the other few idiots, don't know what their talking about...

I personally don't care for Chief Lindgren or City Manager Parness, for uncalled remarks they have made against me and others on the police department in the past. But, there is no question in my mind that City Manager Parness has taken the right actions, against Chief Lindgren...

If there anyone to feel sorry for, or to give consideration to, it should be the men on the police department. When I retired from the Livermore Police Department in 1975, I gave notice to Chief Lindgren of my retirement, and stated in this letter that while working under Chief Lindgren, he showed me nothing. I also stated that while working in the Detective Division... under Captain Essex, that this man, a leader with high qualities, would some day make a great chief of police. I'm sorry to hear that he will not compete for chief...

Issues candidate

Editor, The Times:

How does your candidate stand with the issues? Below are some of the issues on which you should determine the stand of the city council candidates:

Big Brother Government, Jarvis Initiative, Industry to create jobs and help pay taxes, Pipeline, Diamond Lane, Elected Mayor, City Management.

Push the candidates at coffees and candidates nights to give you a Yes or a No. Don't let them walk the fence. Let's elect an Issue-Oriented ed Councilman who will stand up for what the voters want.

May I suggest you choose a candidate who does not act as though Private Enterprise and Profits were dirty words. If we can't live without Big Brother, how did we get from the cave, log cabin, or wherever your family started? Elect a candidate that knows the Issues and Makes Sense.

Cultural Arts

Editor, The Times:

As chairmen of the recent Livermore Cultural Arts Council "Arts and Flowers Dance," we would like to thank the many individuals and businesses who helped make it a success. Community involvement seems to be synonymous with L.C.A.C. sponsored activities and this was no exception.

Services and/or equipment were provided by the following businesses or organizations: City of Livermore, L.A.R.P.D., School District, Lloyd's Bank, Helen's Blossom Shop, Alden Lane Nursery, Audio Arts, Livermore Art Association, and the three local newspapers. The almost total involvement by L.C.A.C. people was most gratifying as were the efforts of hard working people who were not affiliated with any organizations, but just "wanted to help out."

The Arts Council hopes to make this an annual event at about this time of the year. I hope we can make this dance even more successful next year.

Again, thanks to all of you for contributing your time, talent and resources.

Get out the air freshener!

The Miller smell is still very strong on the Livermore City Council.

As long as this noxious smell clings to the walls of City Hall you can forget about business of any meaningful consequence ever coming to town.

To get rid of this smell, check to see where the fat-cat incumbents and candidates are getting their campaign contributions and spray a liberal amount of deodorizer at the polls.

Editor, The Times:

April 15 is the day chosen for the ecology fair. The annual event is sponsored by the Valley Ecology Center to promote citizen awareness of ecological issues. The fair will be located at the Barn in Livermore. Local or national organizations, government agencies, and companies who are interested in promoting ecologically sound concepts or products are welcomed to participate. Applications for more exhibition booths are now being accepted. Please call 443-5588.

A general meeting has been called by Valley Ecology Center Board to discuss future direction of the Center. Activities of the center include study groups, ecology lecture series, ecology fair, ecological advisory services. We need new ideas, suggestions, broader membership support to strengthen the Center's services. Input from the membership and general public is greatly appreciated. The meeting will be Monday, Feb. 27, 8 p.m. at 5224 Diane Lane, Livermore. For more information call 443-5588 or 443-5504.

55 MPH

Editor, The Times:

I find it hard to believe that Earl Waters was serious in his statements concerning the 55 MPH speed limit (The Times, 2/8/78). Waters described the enactment of the speed limit as "an emergency measure to conserve fuel during a short lived gasoline crunch."

I'm sorry to inform Waters that the "gasoline crunch" was not "shortlived". President Carter has stated publicly that the energy crisis is permanent. It may be easier now to buy gasoline at your local station than it was in 1973, but this is by no means an indication that the fuel shortage is over or even close to it.

Whether or not the safety aspects of the 55 mph limit have been exaggerated by the CHP is debatable. Waters claims that before 1973, the number of deaths on the state's highways were three per 100 million miles of vehicular travel, and that the reduction of this figure to 2.29 deaths per 100 million miles since 1973 represents "a minuscule reduction." This reduction may seem minuscule from a statistical point of view, but were it the life of Waters' wife or child or best friend which made up this "minuscule" difference, I think he would feel differently.

The fact also remains that one's chances of dying in an automobile accident are 50 percent higher if one is traveling at 65 mph rather than at 55 mph. This remains true no matter how well designed the freeway. Any traffic law which cuts in half my chances of dying during a collision is a good law, and I believe Sir Robert Peel would agree.

Round the town

Australia is a story in conflicts. For the visitor, that struggle becomes clear after a few days spent in any one of the country's five metropolitan centers, followed by a tour of the land... the vast, lonely land.

Here is a nation embracing three million square miles, equal to that of the continental United States; but Australia today claims less than 15 million residents, one-third of whom live in or close by the city of Sydney.

It is that urban concentration, coupled with the city dwellers' demand for more social reforms, better wages and benefits, which Australians in the "Outback" say "will be the bloody ruin of this country."

To visit Sydney, or Melbourne or Perth, is to visit any other modern, attractive metropolis in the world... particularly the major cities of Europe.

To spend even one week in the ranch country 100 miles or more from the Australian east coast is to go back 150 years in the history of our own nation, when Americans were struggling to open the last of our frontiers.

In the continent down under, those frontiers begin almost where the narrow urban strip ends. In over two and one-half million square miles inland from the coasts, less than 500,000 people make their home. And yet within that same unwanted expanse there rests mineral resources to feed the world's industry or, some say, potential foodstuffs for the world's hungry.

Australia is slowly, very slowly beginning to harvest its vast mineral resources... against odds that now include the claim of native-born aborigines to the "sacred ancestral grounds" of that same far-north tract where a rich deposit of uranium was discovered. The aversion held by most Australians to any claim by those dark-skinned nomads is tempered, in this case, by some popular resistance to developing fuel for the major nuclear powers. But the betting is that the uranium developers, backed by powerful labor unions, will win the battle.

That is more than can be said for the chances of the Australian rancher.

This harsh land, much of it arid, is almost wholly dependent on the uncertainties of tropical seasons. (Some of the heaviest rains come in mid-summer.)

Last year there was very little rain at all, costing ranchers up to one-third of their cattle herds... victims of the drought, or of being "bogged" in the small dams which, once drained of most of their water, became muddy traps from which the weakened beasts could not be moved.

On "Thorpedale", the ranch of our son and his family, those losses ran to 40 head. Others in that area reported losing 100 head, one-third of their total herd.

We spent one week on Thorpedale, visiting with Jim, his wife Deirdree and their three lovely (my biased opinion) daughters. It also gave us the opportunity to talk with other ranchers and their wives, in that rugged land, 250 miles inland from Brisbane. It might just as well be 2500 miles.

"The city folk and their politicians don't give a damn for the rancher," any one of them will tell you. "When a man works most of his life to bring a 2500 acre ranch into production, and then has to stand by while that investment goes to waste, then he's got a right to be bitter."

That is a rural complaint familiar to most Americans today. In Australia, it is a message that seems rarely to reach into the cities, along the lovely coast where nine-tenths of the nation's populace lives and plays and thrives in relative comfort.

There seems little doubt that Australia's future rests with its natural resources. But there seems little national urgency, at least by American standards, to focus federal attention, and money, on the Outback.

Australia is a country committed to generous social programs. Hospitalization is virtually free. Most medical attention costs the patient only a fraction of the doctor's bill.

Each child brings that family a federal bonus check... $3.50 per week for the first born, $5 for the second and third, $6 per week for the fourth child.

But it is not the dole to which the rugged Australian rancher looks in order to survive. They look instead for "the chance to make it, to make this land support me and mine."

Just what that requires, of one family on the fringe of the Australian Outback, is the experience my wife and I shared, in seven days on Thorpedale.

In an upcoming column, I will try to share some of that experience with you.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My daughter's seriously interested in a man who's been married before and who was an acquaintance of a man in my office. My co-worker, whom I respect very much, tells me that this man was arrested twice for wife beating. I don't know whether to tell my daughter this, because she might think I was simply trying to break up their relationship, or whether I should say nothing and let her find out for herself. My wife thinks she's planning on marrying this man. I haven't even told my wife what I know. I'd hate to see my daughter in any kind of physical or mental pain and would do almost anything I could to protect her. — A.Y.

DEAR A.Y.: So much depends on the quality of your relationship with your daughter. If you're very close to her, she might accept what you tell her, but I'd guess it would be easier for her to believe and consider it if it came from your wife, rather than from you. I definitely think she should be made aware of this information if you're certain it's true.

Studies indicate that most men who beat and physically mistreat their wives came from homes where they saw their fathers beat their mothers. Relatively few have, or had, good relationships with their parents. Alcohol seems to play an important part in many marital quarrels that reach the point of violence.

Neither you nor your wife can determine or control your daughter's choice of man, but you can give her the opportunity to make an informed choice.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Sometimes I worry about my 13-year-old nephew because he just seems too perfect, at least whenever I'm around. When I stayed with the family for two months I never saw him angry, sad, or really joyous. It seems abnormal for a child not to be able to occasionally show displeasure or even anger. I watched him play with other children, all of them younger and smaller and I noticed to my horror that he acted like a terrible bully when he thought no one was watching. He never plays with children his own age and he has few friends. His father is a strict army man.

Could it be his doing or is this just part of 13-year-old growing pains? — B.N.

DEAR B.N.: I don't think it's part of growing up. Every human being has to be allowed the freedom to express some of his feelings once in a while or there is bound to be a dangerous and explosive build-up of tension and rage. Keeping to tight a lid on emotions can result in an outburst of sudden violence. One often reads of crimes being committed by the "perfect student," or the "quiet boy who never did anything wrong." People have to be taught to get things off their chest, whether these are feelings of sadness, of anger or of love.

Many doctors today feel that males would have better physical health generally if they were taught as children that there is nothing wrong with expressing their feelings. In other words, men might have fewer ulcers and heart attacks if they were taught as little boys that it's quite acceptable to cry once in a while.

It sounds to me as if this boy already needs some professional help. I appreciate the fact that there's probably relatively little you can do to help, but you might try to encourage your nephew's parents to consider getting a professional opinion before the child is in serious difficulty.

"YOUR BLOCKS??... I THINK YOU LEFT THEM IN THE KITCHEN."

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am 19 years old, weigh about 135 pounds and am about 5 feet 7. I've been lifting weights and doing calisthenics faithfully for over two years, every other day for three hours.

I have a decent build, but I think my features do deserve more enlargement for the amount of stress I place on them. If I would do one thousand push ups with a 10-pound weight strapped on my back I would not show it at all.

What is your suggestion? Should I invest in the pills recommended for weight gain or protein powder or what?

DEAR READER—You really should be in good shape and I am pleased that you are interested in developing and maintaining your strength and appearance. The truth is you are not spending your effort to your best advantage.

Muscle size is largely dependent upon how heavy a weight the muscle can lift or the amount of strength it is able to contract with. You can't develop a lot of strength or size by simply repeating the same contractions. A thousand push ups with a 10-pound weight strapped to your back will only develop your muscles to the point they can lift your body weight with the 10 pound weight and no more. You could probably have done that the first day of your program.

The trick is to increase the load. It is better to strap a 50-pound weight to your back and do 10 push ups than a 10-pound weight and do a thousand. It only requires a few contractions — about 10 every other day and repeat the series of 10 — after a short rest to stimulate muscle growth. More than this amount simply increases the endurance capacity of your muscles. When you can handle that weight for 10 contractions with ease you can go on to a larger weight, not more contractions.

Pills, protein powders and diets that increase your calorie content will not help you grow muscles. All they can do is increase your body fat — which is not healthy. Did you know that any protein you ingest that is not used to build muscle or protein compounds in the body is simply converted to fatty acids and carbohydrates? From that point on your body handles the excess protein just like sugar or fat.

Since you won't be able to grow more than an extra pound of muscle a week you don't need as much protein as you might think. A pound of muscle is mostly water and contains only 100 grams of protein. It follows that a pound of lean meat a week in addition to your regular well-balanced diet furnishes all the extra protein you need for a good response to your exercise program. It figures out that if you have a balanced diet with enough calories of any type that all you need is 100 grams of good protein a day in your diet from all sources to support a muscle development program.

Your goals will be in clearer focus this coming year. You'll know where you're going and what you want. You're not likely to settle for partial victories.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) When we offer to serve others, often we gain more benefits than those we help. Such is the case today, because you act with unselfish motives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Those you team up with are fortunate to have you on their side today. Your good fortune in partnership situations will spin off to them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Expect the unexpected in things relating to your career or material matters today. Anything can happen, but whatever comes about will be good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Have no fear about meeting new people today. The imprint you make on their subconscious will be excellent and lasting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If ever there was a day for you to close a deal, this is it. Keep abreast of anything vital to you until you have the loose ends tied up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The social whirl beckons to you today. Heed its call. There's plenty of excitement out where the bright lights and the people are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Cultivate any top-drawer friends you have today. There could be a chance to make a profit if you would come unheralded through one of these pals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your mind has no lack of ability to figure out the angles today. Meet any challenges head-on, because you'll find a way to conquer them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there's a way to increase your bank balance today, you may come upon it through intuition. Don't hesitate to try. You're keen in this area.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Get out today and rub some elbows. There could be a person out there who'll turn out to be an excellent ally in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you've despaired about something you began long ago that has not borne fruit, fret no more. The first seedlings could show their heads today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) People may call on you to handle tough projects they couldn't manage themselves. You can do it so easily it appears to be just a piece of cake.

win at bridge

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

South's two notrump was the unusual notrump to show both minors. It was rather unusual for an unusual notrump, but it did get South to six diamonds.

East covered the king of hearts with his ace. South ruffed, led his king of trumps, continued with a trump to the ace, ruffed a heart, led a spade to dummy's ace, ruffed another heart, entered dummy with the king of spades and was ready to attack clubs.

The only thing he feared was a 4-1 or 5-0 break and he had worked out a complete guard provided that East held the king of clubs as the bidding indicated.

He led dummy's queen. East covered with the king, South took his ace and led a second club. West showed out, but South didn't care. He took dummy's jack, led dummy's last heart and discarded one of his losing clubs.

West was in and had to lead a spade or heart. It didn't matter. South ruffed in dummy, discarded his last club and claimed.

The lineup for, and against Jarvis-Gann

By BOB EGELKO

Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The organized opposition to the Jarvis property tax initiative far outweighs the organized support — and sponsors of the measure say they couldn't be happier.

"They can have all those organizations. We have the people," Paul Gann, a retired salesman and public relations man who is the cosponsor of the June 6 ballot measure, said in an interview.

Gann said the initiative, Proposition 13 on the ballot, is being backed by taxpayers' and homeowners' associations — generally composed of business people, professionals and middle-class workers — in 33 counties, but doesn't have the endorsement of any established statewide groups.

Opposition comes generally from school groups, local governments, labor, and others who could be hurt by the loss of an estimated $7 billion in local property tax revenue.

The most potent organized support for the measure comes from a group of Los Angeles apartment owners led by Howard Jarvis, the 74-year-old retired businessman who is the other cosponsor.

The 116,000-member California Association of Realtors hasn't officially endorsed the initiative, but lobbyist Dugald Gillies says most individual members appear to favor it. The group is lobbying against a bill that is the major legislative alternative to the initiative.

By BOB EGELKO

Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Howard Jarvis, author of the property tax initiative on the June ballot, failed to show up Thursday at a joint appearance with a state legislator whom he called a "senile old man."

Jarvis later denied he had used those words, said he had forgotten about the appearance, and issued an apology to the legislator.

It was the third time in a month, and second in the last two days, that Jarvis, 74-year-old sponsor of Proposition 13, had not turned up at a scheduled appearance with a legislator who opposed the initiative.

He was scheduled to speak on a panel at a tax reform convention Thursday afternoon. Another of the panel members was veteran state Sen. Peter Behr, R-Tiburon, author of a property tax cut bill that is considered the chief legislative alternative to the Jarvis measure.

In a television interview Thursday morning, Jarvis said he would not appear on the panel and was flying back to Los Angeles. He said he did not want to debate "a senile old man."

Told of the statement, the 62-year-old Behr laughed and said, "Under present law, no one can slander a politician. If he enjoyed saying it, I enjoyed hearing it about myself."

In a telephone interview from Los Angeles Thursday afternoon, Jarvis denied using the words "senile old man" to describe Behr.

"I didn't say that at all — maybe I said it about myself," Jarvis said. He said Behr is "a very nice elderly gentleman," and added, "If I said anything that sounded like that, tell him I apologize."

But two reporters from Sacramento television station KXTV said they were present when Jarvis called Behr a "senile old man."

Jarvis also said he had forgotten about the scheduled panel appearance, and didn't know that he had been scheduled to appear at a televised debate at another Sacramento station on Wednesday.

But Leah Cartabruno, producer of the television show, said she had arranged the appearance with Jarvis on the telephone earlier, and that another station official had confirmed it in a phone conversation with Jarvis earlier Wednesday.

The two major local government lobbies, the County Supervisors Association of California and the League of California Cities, also oppose the measure, and so do groups representing sanitation agencies and special districts like water and fire districts, and several firefighters' groups.

The California State Employees Association is expected to oppose the initiative at a meeting this weekend. The state's biggest labor group, the 1.7-million member California Labor Federation, AFL-CIO, is expected to join the opponents at its convention in April.

Most major business groups, including the state Chamber of Commerce and California Manufacturers Association, have taken no position. But the California Taxpayers Association, whose members include 1,300 businesses, is opposing the Jarvis measure.

"We agree with its purported goal, to cut government spending," said Cal-Tax spokesman Kirk West. "But in the long run it will move government farther from the people and increase state control."

"Our members feel they are overtaxed and they want relief. But we've always advocated giving the bulk of relief to homeowners."

He was referring to the fact that under the Jarvis initiative, owners of business and commercial property, including apartments, would get about $4.3 billion of the $7 billion in tax relief.

Gann said the Cal-Tax stand refutes the claim that "we're giving big business a windfall" because Cal-Tax represents business.

He also said groups of apartment owners would be making public pledges to lower rents if the initiative passes. As written, the measure does not offer a tax cut to renters.

Gann also made light of the League of Women Voters' announcement of opposition this week, saying a number of individual league members called him the same day to tell him they supported the initiative.

The nonpartisan league said the measure could cripple local government by depriving it of its main revenue source while making it virtually impossible to raise other taxes.

It also criticized the initiative's 2 percent limit on assessment increases except at times of sale.

But the backbone of support for the measure is the so-called taxpayers' revolt, a broad and diffuse movement that extends far beyond the 25,000 members Gann claims for his People's Advocates and Jarvis' United Organizations of Taxpayers. The groups collected 1.2 million signatures to qualify the initiative for the ballot.

Opponents number at least 25 statewide organizations, including most major educational groups, some labor groups, the League of Women Voters, and an important business lobby, the California Taxpayers Association.

Many important groups and politicians — including Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. — remain publicly uncommitted, waiting for the Legislature to act on a bill to cut property taxes. Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, is the only prominent politician to speak out against the measure.

Former Gov. Ronald Reagan signed an initiative petition, but spokesman Peter Hannaford said Reagan has not endorsed the measure.

The initiative would cut property taxes by nearly two-thirds by limiting them to 1 percent of market value. It makes no provision to restore the estimated $7 billion or more in lost tax revenue to local government. Critics say the loss of the money will either cripple such local services as police and fire departments and schools, or force a huge state tax increase and loss of local control over programs.

School groups, citing the possibility of large-scale layoffs, school closings and a doubling of class size from the loss of $2.5 billion in property tax revenue, have been prominent in opposition to the measure.

Opponents include the California Teachers Association, California Federation of Teachers and California School Employees Association; California School Boards Association and Association of California School Administrators, and state school Superintendent Wilson Riles.

Fed grazing fee hike off for a year

By JOHN LENGEL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Friday put off for one year a Carter administration plan to raise federal grazing land fees for western stockmen.

Supporters said the moratorium will allow time for Congress to draft a new grazing fee law which addresses both the poor condition of federal rangelands and the economic woes of stock raisers.

Meanwhile, the fees this year would remain the same: $1.51 per animal per month on Bureau of Land Management lands, and $1.61 on national forest lands.

Without congressional action the administration hike, first in a series, would go into effect. The fee for 1978 would be $1.89 for BLM lands and $2.00 on forest lands.

By a vote of 257 to 47 the House sent the suspension on to the Senate, which is expected to concur.

The aim of the administration is to charge stockmen roughly what they would pay for use of private rangeland. By 1981, cattle, sheep and horse raisers would be paying roughly $3.55 under the formula used by the administration. Administration estimates are that the hikes would cost 72 percent of the federal grazing permit holders an additional $60. That's for a rancher running from 100 to 150 head of cattle. They use about 38 percent of the grazing land.

Most western congressmen supported the moratorium, saying the fee increase could ruin many cattle ranchers who are already losing money because of drought and low market prices.

About 3.3 percent of the permit holders control 38 percent of the federal grazing land. Many of these big ranchers face paying up to $16,000 more this year.

Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, said it seemed the House Interior Committee managers of the bill were bent on saving big ranching operations.

But, said Rep. Max Baucus, D-Mont., "without some help there won't be any livestock operations of any size left."

Legislation has been drafted authorizing $360 million over 20 years for range improvements and pegging grazing fees to a formula reflecting rancher's costs and profits.

USF: bye-bye Edgar, welcome back title

SAN FRANCISCO — What always happens to Edgar Jones made what happened to the University of San Francisco twice in a row all the easier.

Jones, Nevada-Reno's foul-prone 6-10 center, fouled out with 11:35 remaining yesterday enabling the Dons to hold on for a 78-73 win and their second consecutive West Coast Athletic Conference championship.

"The refs be watchin' me. They say, 'Edgar, don't do that, Edgar, get out of the lane,'" a visibly upset Jones raged after being limited to 20 minutes playing time. "I'm tiring of that. It's garbage."

Jones, who overcame a remarkably similar situation to lead the Wolfpack past California in their previous Bay Area visit, managed 13 points and six rebounds but couldn't shake the thought that the officials were out to get him.

"Every big game we have, I've got four fouls on me by the half and nobody ever fouls me. Somebody must tell the refs to do that," said Jones. "They're giving college basketball a bad name. A lot of people came down here from Reno to see me, they didn't come to see me wastin' time on the bench."

Forward Michael Stallings, who snatched 14 rebounds and hit seven of 11 shots from the floor while playing the full 40 minutes, agreed.

"Everytime we start a game, it's the same thing, they pick on him," the 6-6 junior college transfer from Brooklyn said, pointing at Jones, slipping into a three-piece suit a few feet away.

Jones, saying what seems a little too good to be true, added, "USF didn't want me out, they wanted to play basketball."

Don't be so sure.

"We certainly tried to get the ball in on Edgar because of his track record of foul trouble," said Don coach Bob Gaillard. "They play well without him, though, and they did an incredible defensive job keeping the ball away from (7-foot USF center) Bill (cartwright) on the inside."

Which may explain why, leading 59-52 at the time Jones was serenaded off the floor by the USF student body, the Dons slowed the pace of the game, instead of trying to take advantage of the lack of a mobile big man in the middle of the Wolfpack zone.

Twice in the final four minutes Reno cut USF's edge to three points on inside shots by Stallings, but the Dons never trailed in the second half. Winford Boynes saw to that in the first five minutes.

USF took the lead for good in the opening moments of the second on a jumper by Rod Williams, like Gaillard making his final appearance in War Memorial Gym, and, then, the Juice started flowing.

Boynes scored four times inside the lane and added a free throw as the Dons built an eight-, then a nine-point lead. Then Jones fouled out. What more could a team ask for?

Maybe the type of performance Doug Jemison promised — and delivered — in the first half. He didn't jump into the balcony, but the rest of his prophecies, and more, came true.

By halftime, the cocky junior had canned seven of 11 field goal attempts, some from beyond Jemison's usual shooting range, and pulled in seven rebounds. When it was over, he had 21 points and 11 rebounds.

"After we lost to Reno in the opener, we worked on what we had to do to beat them," recalled Jemison, explaining. "Their zone was sagging onto Bill and by the time they got back to me, it was too late."

Too late for Reno, but right on time for USF's 12th WCAC championship.

Retains bantamweight crown Zarate wins 50th fight

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — World Boxing Council bantamweight champion Carlos Zarate said Alberto Davila was the "toughest fighter I've fought" after stopping the challenger in the eighth round of their title bout Saturday.

Davila, a sometime clothing salesman who had lost four of his 29 fights coming into the match, did provide Zarate with more competition than he's used to.

Pound for pound the most explosive puncher in ring history, Zarate has generally not required eight rounds to dispose of his foes. Unbeaten now in 50 fights, Zarate logged his 49th knockout when he sent Davila to the canvas.

Davila got up before he was counted out, but the fight was stopped because of a cut near his eye.

"I didn't think he would get up," Zarate said after the victory. "But if he did, I was really going to go after him. It was a good thing for him it was stopped."

The champion, who said he went into the fight with respect for the challenger's ability, added that he was not surprised at the way the fight went.

"I started slowly and planned to let him have it after the fourth round," Zarate said. "It was the toughest my title fights, and he was the toughest fighter I've fought."

Davila said he was stunned by the knockout punch but was ready to go on.

"I am very disappointed," he said. "I felt I could have continued except for the cut. I didn't even know I was cut."

Davila, a decided underdog, kept the fight even through the early rounds, but the champion took control in the sixth and finally stopped the challenger at 2:16 in the eighth round.

The successful title defense was the sixth for Zarate, of Mexico City, who used his five-inch height advantage over the 5-foot-3 Davila, from Pomona, Calif.

Zarate played a waiting game through the first five rounds, but began stalking Davila in the sixth, landing quick combinations to the head and body.

He stayed on the attack in the seventh, as Davila appeared to grow weary, then ended it in the next round by trapping the challenger in a corner.

A flurry of left and right hooks, the last blow a short right to the side of Davila's head, sent the challenger to the canvas. A physician examined Davila and stopped the bout because of a cut over his right eye.

Zarate, who won the title with a ninth-round knockout of Rodolfo Martinez in this same Forum ring in the spring of 1976, continued his amazing knockout string with the victory over the game Davila.

A youth who grew up fighting on the streets and was first pushed into the ring by an older brother, Zarate has failed to knock out only one foe, in a 10-round decision over Vic Ramirez four years ago.

Davila, a clothing salesman who had won his last seven fights, dropped to 25-5 with the loss.

1950's trio will join NBA Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Three National Basketball Association stars of the 1950s will be enshrined at the Basketball Hall of Fame along with an early NBA pro and one of the game's best-known officials, the museum announced Saturday.

Hall of Fame officials announced new inductees will be Paul Arizin, Jim Pollard and Cliff Hagan for the May 1 induction, along with the late Joe Fulks, who starred in the 1940s, and veteran referee John Nucatola.

"I guess this is the highest honor that can come to a basketball player, and probably the last one," said Hagan, a University of Kentucky forward who later scored 14,908 points with the NBA's St. Louis Hawks.

Hagan said he was surprised his former teammate at Kentucky, Frank Ramsey, was not named to the hall. He called his own election another tribute to Adolph Rupp, the longtime Kentucky coach who died last year.

"I'm sorry Coach Rupp couldn't be here... We had talked about it, and he was very supportive of the Hall of Fame," he said.

Hagan, now athletic director at his alma mater, will share the spotlight with Arizin, who many times played against Hagan when the Hawks met Arizin's Philadelphia Warriors.

"He was in the prime of his career when I came into the league, a great shooter," Hagan said.

Arizin played in 10 all-star games in as many years in the NBA. He retired in 1961 with a 22.8 points-per-game career average.

Pollard, who is studying for a master's degree at Nova College in Davie, Fla., made four NBA all-star teams and helped the Minneapolis Lakers to six championships, including three in a row from 1952 through 1954.

His 23-year-old son Jeff said Pollard had seen several friends inducted into the Springfield shrine and was looking forward to joining them. "But my mother is more excited about it than anybody," he added.

"Wow, I've just been on cloud nine for the last few weeks since I heard the news," said the 70-year-old Nucatola from his New York City home.

Nucatola recalled working his first game as an official in the city in 1926.

"It was a high school game I worked alone and I got paid 50 cents. But I worked as hard then as I did in any NBA playoff."

Nucatola, who was supervisor of officials for the Ivy League, the ECAC and finally the NBA, has been a leading advocate of three-man officiating teams.

Joe Fulks Jr., a 30-year-old assistant high school basketball coach in Benton, Ky., said "I still meet people who say they saw my father play. In fact, I meet more of them every day," he laughed.

Joe Fulks Sr., who died in a shooting incident in Kentucky two years ago, starred for the Philadelphia Warriors in the late 1940s. His shot — made off a twisting pivot move — was a forerunner of the jump shot. In 1947 he scored 63 points in one game.

Cooper runs 13.8 to lead Spartan trackmen

SAN JOSE — Dedy Cooper captured both hurdles events and anchored a winning relay team to give San Jose State a victory in a four-way track meet with Stanford, Hayward State and Stanislaus State Saturday.

Cooper won the 110-meter high hurdles in a meet-record 13.8 and the 400-meter intermediate hurdles in 51.7, then anchored the Spartans' mile relay team to a victory in 3:12.3.

San Jose's 98 points bested Stanford with 73, Hayward with 27 and Stanislaus with 8.

Stanford was led by football All-American James Lofton, who won the 200-meter dash in 21.0 and the long jump with a leap of 25-feet, 2-inches. Lofton also ran a leg on Stanford's winning 400-meter relay team, which clocked a 39.9.

Two other meet records were set Saturday. Keith Nelson of San Jose State cleared 7-feet, 1/8-inch to capture the high jump and Coleman Kells of San Jose had a record hammer throw of 186-1.

Olympian Ron Livers of San Jose won the triple jump with a leap of 53-1 and Stanford's Tom Lobsinger won the mile in 4:10.4. Ron Whitaker of San Jose won the 100-meter dash in 10.4, despite running into a five mile an hour wind.

Irwin, with rounds of 69 and 71, shot a 3-under-par 69 to take sole possession of the thirdround lead in quest of the $50,000 first prize.

Grier Jones, the first-round leader, shared the lead with Irwin for most of the day but also bogeyed No. 17 to end the day 6-under for the tournament.

A's complete deal with Reds for Revering

TAMPA, Fla. — The Cincinnati Reds announced Saturday they had obtained pitcher Doug Bair for first baseman Dave Revering and cash in an inter-league baseball trade with the Oakland A's.

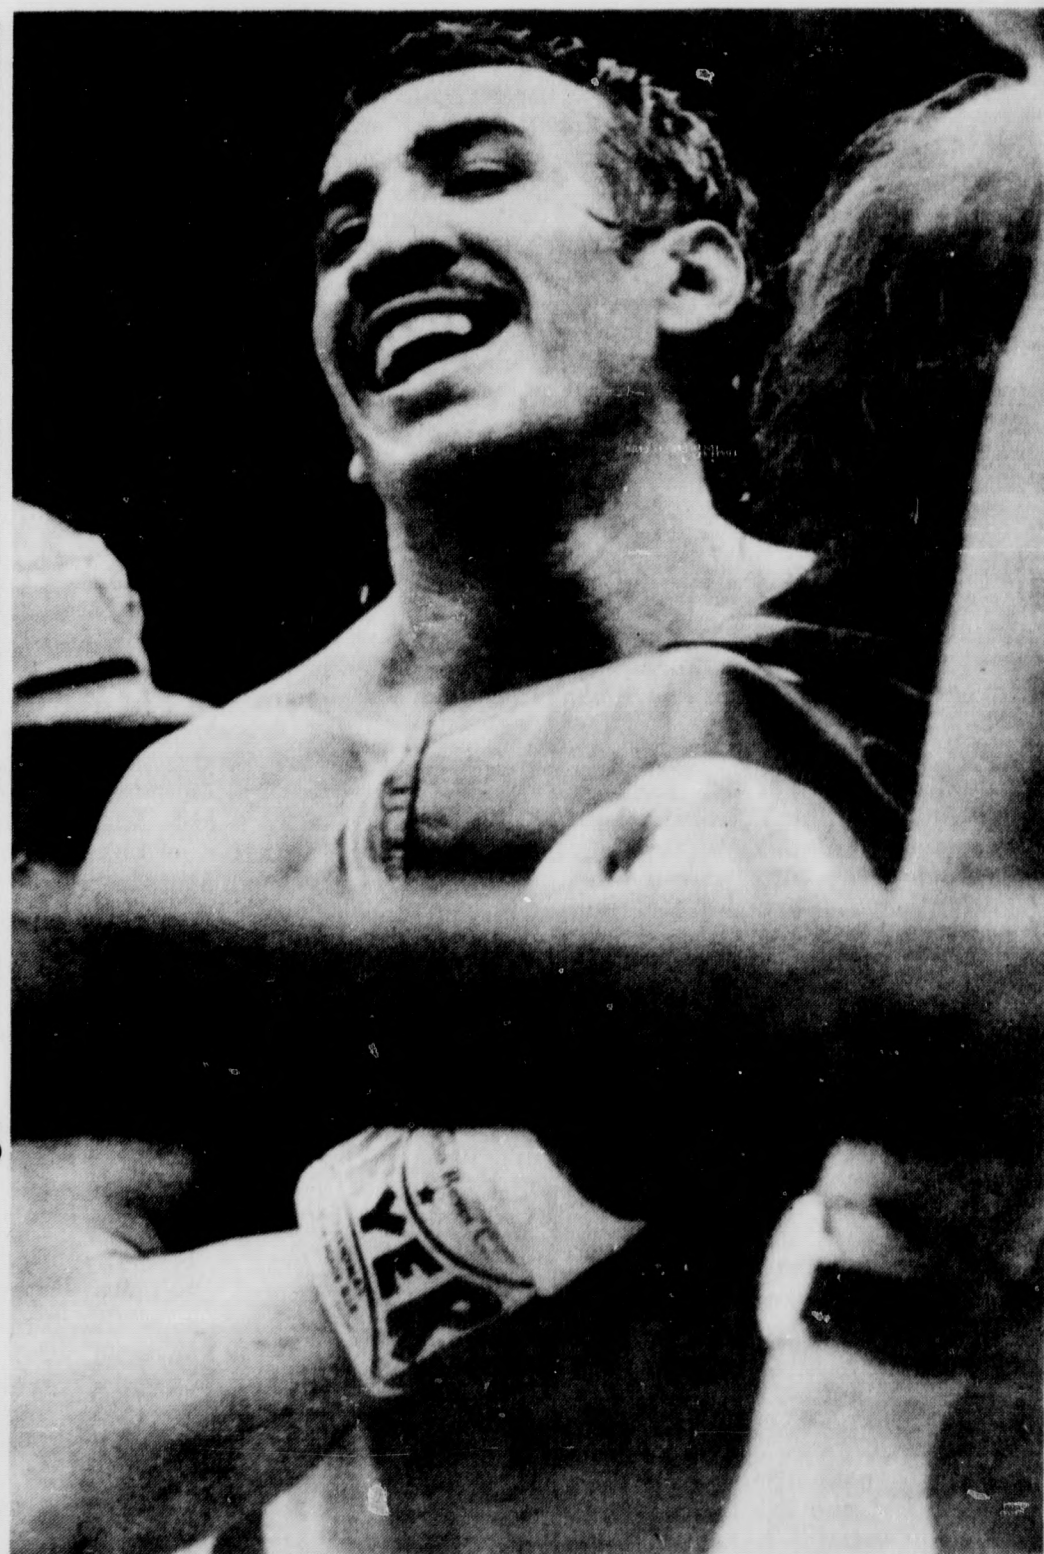

Revering, who hit .300 with 29 home runs and 110 runs batted in in the minor leagues last season, originally was sent to Oakland as part of a million dollar deal that was to send pitcher Vida Blue to the Reds. The transaction was nullified by baseball commission Bowie Kuhn.

Bair, a right-hander, posted a 4-6 record at Oakland last year, with eight saves and a 3.47 earned run average.

leader was Howard Twitty, who shot a 2-under-par 70 to go with his 71 and 69 for a three-day total of 210, and Andy Bean, a co-leader after two rounds who was even for the day.

Jaekel had one birdie but also two bogeys to go 1 over for the day and dropped to 5 under after seven holes of the third round.

Bean scored two birdies but also made three bogeys and a double bogey in the first seven holes to drop to 5 under while Edwards suffered three bogeys through seven holes to also fall to 3 under.

Irwin leads Gleason Golf by two strokes

LAUDERHILL, Fla. — Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, adjusting his swing slightly on the fourth hole, shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to move within 2 strokes of thirdround leader Hale Irwin in the $250,000 Jackie Gleason Invitational Classic.

Nicklaus, who earlier had rounds of 70 and 75, came through with seven birdies but bogeyed No. 17 over the par-72, 7,126-yard Inverrary Country Club course to fall only 1 stroke shy of his personal goal of 65 for the round.

Amador plays it straight, slips by Cal

5-time EBAL champs head for Hayward

Amador Valley High's basketball team has this knack of getting the job done as easily as possible. Without pumping in a single field goal in the last 3:43 of the game, and without exerting so much as a whisker of offensive force in that same time span, the Dons beat California High 53-42 to win the East Bay Athletic League playoffs and avoid a second meeting between the squads.

The Dons' live and let foul party worked to anticipated perfection for AV coach Skip Mohatt, who now boasts five consecutive trips to post-season basketball action.

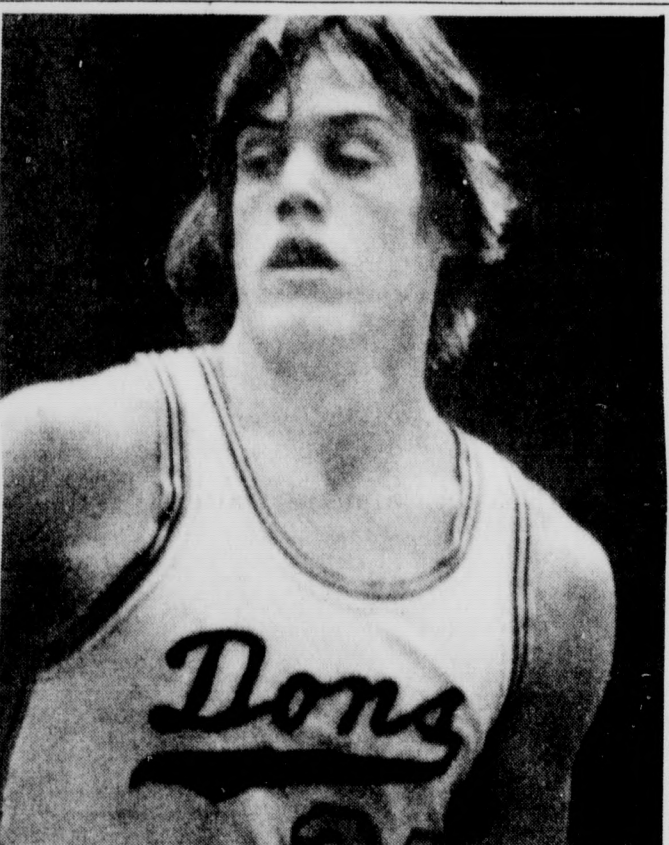

Action begins Wednesday for the Dons at Cal State Hayward in the North Coast Section playoffs, and the competition will be decidedly stiff.

Amador hit on eleven straight free throws during a stretch late in the fourth quarter to put away the exciting, spirited Grizzlies, a team which won the hearts of the Dublin High crowd — about 2,000 strong — by giving the disciplined Dons all they could handle for the third time this year.

What afforded the Dons this luxury of a keep-away, stalling offense over the final minutes came from a sophomore reserve forward who rode the bench most of the time behind seniors Ken Noble, Rick Howard and Chris Kearns.

Greg Kragen, who began to develop a confidence and assertiveness in his play following the Dons' overtime win over Livermore two weeks ago, grabbed three crucial offensive rebounds and responded with baskets, two of which came midway through the final quarter when the Grizzlies were clutching to a 35-33 lead after trailing virtually the entire second and third quarters.

With 5:31 to play, Kragen made one of two free throws to cut the lead to 35-34. Following the basket, Amador guard Paul Campana put the Dons back on top with a steal and lay-in for a 36-35 lead.

Greg Kragen hugged the boards

Dave Weber...On Sports

Once upon a time...

Now, not many folks list Amador Valley High School's Dons as their favorite basketball team.

There's that point-a-minute offense and those garish two-tone uniforms and, oh yes, they win. And win. And win. Five times in a row now.

If East Bay Athletic League commissioner George Wilson ever takes advice from Bowie Kuhn the Dons may get thrown out of the league for upsetting the competitive balance. That's not in the best interests of the game.

People moan "break up the Dons" and every spring the school board obliges and graduates a few of Skip Mohatt's more useful cagers. He looks both ways to make sure no one is watching and pulls a few more off his assembly line.

A prophet may be without honor in his own land, but a winner is without friends away from his home court. Who, outside of a few Great Lakes eskimos ever liked the Green Bay Packers? Name some one who doesn't "pahk the cahrr," but rooted for the Boston Celtics of yore?

And, how 'bout the Oakland A's? They didn't even like each other.

Not a few of the 2000-odd people sitting and screaming in Dublin High School's gym Friday night were hoping for a fairy tale finish. California had reached the play-offs with a 7-7 record only by beating Amador in the regular-season finale last week.

And, though they'd beaten Livermore Wednesday to reach the finals, the Grizzlies had the Cowboy fans support. A few 'Poke rooters took this business of if-you-can't-beat-em-join-em to ridiculous lengths.

As the teams were being introduced, a stocky teenager clad in a fair approximation of a boxer's training attire, the words "Amador Dons" pinned to his back, bounded in front of the Amador bleachers and — what else? — mashed an Orange Crush soft drink can with his bare hands.

The Amador student body roared. The kid led a cheer or two, then turned to "fight off" another youth, this one clad in a Grizzly boosters' jacket.

They sparred briefly and the pseudo-Dons were decked and carted off by four cohorts while the Amador fansat bewildered by the hoax pulled off by a half-dozen Livermore High

With 4:39 to play, Kragen worked inside to rebound a missed shot fired by teammate Darren Pembroke and laid it in the bucket for a 38-35 AV lead.

Kragen's final points of the night came at 3:43, and they were Amador's last without free throws. He made the first and missed the second of two free throws, but Howard snared the rebound. With everybody waiting for Howard to go back up with the shot, he instead dished off to Kragen, who scored underneath and gave AV a 41-37 lead they never looked back on.

"I think Greg just listened to all of these lectures," said Mohatt in trying to explain the sudden turnabout of the soph. "Whatever the reason, he was where he belonged. Greg's a very poised and very proud athlete."

Mohatt was in now way demeaning the listening abilities of Howard, Kearns and Noble. All three have had other things to worry about in the past few games besides being aggressive on the boards.

"When you're in foul trouble, you don't play nearly as aggressive as if you aren't," said Mohatt. "All of these kids have been in foul trouble the past few games. I would say this was our best offensive boards and clutch free throw shooting we've done."

The Dons didn't begrudgingly stand at the free throw line all week pumping in 15-foot uncontested jumpers in practice. Says Mohatt, "About the only thing that we stressed on free throws last week was the fact that Cal shot 35 to our 18 the week before and we had to make sure that didn't happen again."

Cal coach Bill Herrera would be the first to agree about the change in tide.

"It seemed like last time we were doing the shooting and they were doing the fouling," he said of his team's 67-60 win the week before. "This time we were doing the fouling."

Herrera was complimentary of his team in defeat. "It's disappointing to lose. I knew the players were hoping they could pull it off. I didn't think they were flat. They were ready to play. We just made a few mistakes we shouldn't have made. We couldn't even get back in the game with their free throws."

"At times, we had shots, but they just wouldn't fall," Herrera added. "I think it was a respectable effort. Even though we've had kind of a screwy season at times, we've won when we've had to win. We just couldn't do it one more time."

Mohatt was equally impressed with the Grizzlies, who at one point had a league mark of 5-7 and were all but written off from the playoffs.

"I really admire Cal," Mohatt said. "I'd parade them from their coach to the rooting section. They had a team that was within a thread of being out of it, not playing to their potential until the league was almost gone. Herrera brought them back to realize their potential at the right time, which is what coaching is all about. They've taken defeat like real gentlemen."

Herrera believed the Dons might surprise some at NCS, too.

"Amador always does a good job," the Cal mentor said. "They're steady. They always come through when they have to."

As far as rooting sections go, Mohatt was very impressed with the Cal throng.

"They won the EBAL crown in rooting section if you want my vote," said Mohatt. "They were loud, creative, and inspiring for their team."

Quick to add his sentiments to his own school, Mohatt believed "our rooting section did a good job last night. In the last week, they've had quite a rooting competition going with Cal."

Cal High's answer to all the pressure was center Mark Kulak, who came into the program during the middle of last year and who has developed quite a touch from the outside.

Kulak led all scorers with 15 points, with half of those coming from jumpers in range fit for shorter people. The 6-6 pivot man fouled out late in the game, putting a serious dent in Cal comeback hopes with his rebounding power gone.

Chuck Cary followed Kulak with 14 points. The 6-3 senior forward hit on five hard — earned field goals and four of four free throws to keep Cal in the game.

Amador's Howard did an outstanding defensive job on Cal's main fast — break catalyst, Brian Green, who finished with just six points.

Noble led Amador with 13 points, including two buckets from offensive rebounds. In all, the Dons got eight of their 16 field goals from the offensive boards. Cal, which also scored 16 field goals, had to work much harder.

Chris Kearns scored six of AV's 12 points in the second quarter to keep the Dons head at halftime,

Two of the game's dominant forces, Cal's Mark Kulak and Greg Kragen of Amador, jockey for position under the basket.

20-18. Kearns ended the night with eight points.

Pembroke, hitting on all six of his free throw attempts, scored ten for Amador while Campana and Howard scored six.

Cal's Daryl Lamb, who drove well in the 63-61 win over Livermore Wednesday, was by and large halted by Amador and finished with five points.

After Green, Cary and Kulak, only a first-period jumper by Sandy LeBeaux registered in the Cal scoring box. Herrera was hesitant to use his bench after that starting five kept the Dons in check for three and a half quarters.

Mohatt, in assessing his team's season to date, said, "I think this team has had to work a little bit harder (than the other four title teams)."

We don't have the senior depth we had last year that really paid off in pressure games. There was no varsity experience at our guards this year, and other teams have tried to take advantage of that. They (Campana, Pembroke, Rob Santos, Dan Morgan) have really had to work hard."

As far as success at the NCS goes, Mohatt is naturally optimistic. "We played pretty well against strong teams in December," Mohatt said. "We didn't play strong against weak teams. I can't think of an exception. Maybe our potential will rise to the occasion."

Glads go to sleep, lose

HAYWARD — The Chabot College basketball team has two games left of its season, after a lack of concentration cost the Gladiators a 97-80 loss to De Anza here Friday night.

Head coach John Wagoner doesn't think there's much he can do about his faltering defense though in the next couple of days.

"De Anza isn't the first team this season that has done this to us. There's nothing you can do about defending some of those shots, but I don't like it when they get the easy ones on us," a disgruntled Wagoner said.

The Dons John Clark had an easy time collecting an incredible 33 points against the staid Glads, as he hit 15-17 from the floor and didn't miss a shot in the second half. Clark was timely with his accuracy, when he assisted the Dons in pulling away from a close 65-64 score in the middle of the second half. The Dons ran up 13 points on the board to the Glads in five minutes.

"Clark was just able to shoot over our guys. It's hard to beat that kind of shooting," Wagoner explained.

Wagoner was more upset with the lack of psych-up than with Clark's scoring abilities.

"We just go to sleep defensively, especially the bound baskets; those are the ones that kill us. Physically, we're not doing well because mentally we're not a tough team," Wagoner speculated. "When the ball goes up, it's there for two people. It's those people, not the ball," he said.

The Glads presented a respectable game offensively, with three cagers in double figures.

Center Brian Keith stood courageously under the boards, and tipped in a team high 29 points. Steve Fraga, the Glads deadly perimeter shooter, followed with 18, which picked up the spirits of his coach somewhat.

"Steve really shot the ball well. This was probably his best game all season," Wagoner said.

Forward Willie Hardeman added another 14 points for the Glads.

"Our offense is fine, there's no problem there," Wagoner said.

He gestured to his forehead, his left side of his chest, and his abdomen and said, "Here, here, and here, that's what physical of a team. We have to be smart and play intelligently," he commanded.

"We need to be mentally alert. We tend to hurt ourselves and thereby lose concentration," he noted.

Wagoner said that he is no more tired of the lack of aggression now than the first game of the year.

"I just don't know how to change people. I don't expect this kind of thing to happen at all, but I get upset when it does though," he admitted.

There will be no changes in strategies though for the remaining games in the Golden Gate Conference. The Glads travel to San Jose City College Tuesday night, and return home to close out the season with West Valley next Friday.

"After all, what can we change at this late date," Wagoner asked in a helpless tone.

Undeclared season

Amador girls historic

Amador Valley became the first team in East Bay Athletic League girls' basketball history to go undefeated in league play when it topped San Ramon 42-26 in the regular season finale Thursday night at the Don gym.

The Dons finished the season with a 14-0 mark and will advance to the North Coast Section 3-A Championships next week.

Dublin gained second place and an 11-3 mark with a 42-27 victory over Granada. In other EBAL contests California gained third place with a 54-35 win over Monte Vista and Foothill stopped Livermore 44-37.

Jayne Kuhns and Sheryl Withoft each had 12 points to lead AV's victory.

The Dons broke out to a 12-2 first quarter lead and kept a steady lead until the third period when San Ramon outscored them 11-4. However, Amador Valley put the game away with a 16-point spurt in the final period while holding the Wolves to eight markers.

Jamie Watson also played well for the winners, collecting 11 points.

Joanne Callender had 13 points and Clair Allen 12 for Dublin. The Gaels put the game away early with a 16-4 spurt in the first quarter.

Paula Soto led the losers with 10 points on five field goals.

Chris Rhodes pumped in 25 points to lead Foothill over Livermore. Lee Hardiman had 14 and Kim Bohannon 11 for the 'Pokes.

A 20-6 edge in the third period gave California its victory over Monte Vista.

Revel gives 'Quakes depth

SAN JOSE — The San Jose Earthquakes may have found a great right wing when they added Peter Revel of Belgium to their squad.

Resel plays in the Belgian First Division and has excellent speed and quickness, vital assets for a wing.

The Belgian star is 30 years old and is a 5-foot-11, 170 pounder, almost the ideal size for a wing.

Another defender might have to be added to the Earthquake squad since Laurie Calloway and Buzz Demling currently have physical problems.

Calloway landed wrong on his right foot while playing basketball two weeks ago and cannot play on it. The foot was put in a cast and he will have it on for a week.

Demling has been bothered by spasms in his upper back and neck. Demling underwent surgery in the offseason to have a disc removed from his back. Both men are original members of the 'Quakes.

Dallas Deb wins after inquiry

ALBANY — Dallas Deb was declared the winner after stewards disqualified Powder Room for drifting too wide in the stretch in the $26,800 Portola Stakes at Golden Gate Fields Saturday.

Powder Room, with Francisco Mena up, crossed the finish line first in the six-furlong sprint in 1:08.3, but stewards ruled that Dallas Deb and jockey Raul Ramirez had been taken too far to the outside entering the stretch.

"That seven horse took me so wide, I couldn't even ride my filly," Ramirez told officials.

Pepperdine upsets Portland, 70-69

LOS ANGELES — Ray Ellis scored on a follow shot with seven seconds to play Saturday night, giving host Pepperdine a 70-69 upset victory over the University of Portland in the Waves' final West Coast Athletic Conference basketball game of the season.

The victory boosted Pepperdine to 2-12 in league action. The Waves finished the regular season with a 7-19 overall mark. The Pilots are 8-5 in conference play and 18-8 overall.

Michael Knight led the Waves with 27 points and five steals. Danny Ramsey added 18 points and nine rebounds. Ellis finished with nine points and 11 rebounds.

Reserve Reggie Logan paced the Pilots with 22 points. George McCullough added 14 points for Portland.

Pepperdine led most of the way. The Waves led at halftime 36-28, but the Pilots fought back and went ahead 69-68 on a jump shot by McCullough.

O'Malley in satisfactory condition

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Walter O'Malley, board chairman of the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball club, was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday at Methodist Hospital.

A Mayo Clinic spokesman said O'Malley was under observation for a fever. He was stricken Thursday while accompanying the Dodgers from Los Angeles to the team's training camp at Vero Beach, Fla. The team plane was rerouted to bring O'Malley to Rochester.

O'Malley had been hospitalized Feb. 5-16, when an abdominal survey disclosed a diseased artery. Mayo Clinic sources have not said whether the fever O'Malley was stricken with is related to the earlier ailment.

Two models on sale at Casa Ramon

Two professionally decorated model homes are being offered at prices below replacement cost at Casa Ramon, a stylish single-family San Ramon community on Montevideo Drive, according to M.L. (Matt) Longdon, spokesman for W.W. Dean and Associates, the builder.

"Considering the cost and quality of special decorator highlights inside the homes and landscaping details on the sites, these models represent an exceptional value for people who want to move right in and start living, without facing decorating chores," Longdon emphasized.

Models include a ranch-style three bedroom two bath plan, priced at $81,500, and a two-story design with four bedrooms and one-half baths for $94,500. Both homes present upgraded carpeting, drapes, extensive use of wallpaper, decorator mirrors, a variety of interior design accents, and full air conditioning. The 10,000 square foot lots with rear patios are large enough for a swimming pool, gardens, storage facilities, and outdoor recreation.

Early move-in can be arranged at both models, and there is a possibility that a few production homes could become available for the buyer who is ready to act now.

Otherwise, the community sold out very rapidly. Builders attribute this to the many features of the homes themselves and the prime country location, recognized for its privacy and serenity. This rural setting is also conveniently close to schools, shopping, recreation, and freeways 680 and 580, which lead to all Bay Area employment and entertainment centers.

In addition to special features, the model homes also show off the standard appointments of all Casa Ramon residences. These include ceramic tile entryways, custom designed fireplaces, formal dining rooms, family rooms with sliding glass doors to rear yards, and master bedroom suites.

Pre-finished cabinets, luminous ceilings, and ceramic tile counter-tops add beauty to the General Electric kitchens, which are equipped with dishwashers, Americana ranges with double ovens (one self-cleaning), In-sinkerator disposals, and Hi-Lo sinks with Delta faucets. Neighborhood attractiveness is enhanced by cedar shake roofing, full gutters and downspouts, concrete drives and walks, and full fencing with gate. All production homes are built on sites of 7,000 square feet or larger and have raised foundations.

W.W. Dean has concentrated much of its homebuilding efforts in the greater San Francisco Bay Area in recent years. Among their notable successes are Sierra Woods in San Jose, Foster Isles in Foster City, South Park in Santa Clara, Walnut Way at Walnut Country in Concord, and a continuing custom home program at Sky Farm in Hillsborough. The Dean organization also played a major role in the first condominium conversion in Missouri at the stately Parkway Towers in Kansas City.

Tamara homes can be purchased with reduced downpayments.

Union City homes with finance twist

A contemporary collection of three and four bedroom Tamara homes is selling rapidly at the Bren Company's Union City community. These one and two story plans incorporate innovative architecture and traditional comforts with a wide range of features.

A series of unique financing plans to reduce downpayments for qualified home buyers have been introduced at the project. These financing plans allow homebuyers more financial flexibility in the purchase of any of the Tamara plans. These financing plans also pertain to sales at Tamara in Santa Clara and Concord's Walnut Country, as well as the Bren Company's executive home community in Walnut Creek, Pheasant Run.

The Union City homes are well-designed for space and light, with lofty ceilings, enormous windows and balconies in some plans. Each Tamara home offers the buyer an architecturally-distinctive home environment.

Bay area homes: why they settle

Homeowners are delighted with sunken tubs and living rooms but their enjoyment comes to an abrupt halt when the complete home begins to sink.

Homes "on the move" was the recent topic of a Associated Building Industry of Northern California's (ABI) Bonded Remodelers Council meeting. Discussing homes in trouble and the Bay Area soils that can cause structures to move were council member John Ward and soils engineer Curtis Jensen.

Ward told his San Leandro audience that geologically speaking the Bay Area is "very young. The earth here is still moving; the land is creeping. The Danville contractor said the region is a mixture of volcanic and sedimentary formations. "Move two feet and you will find something different."

Jensen, Hallenbeck and McKay Associates, outlined the types of area soils and said that soil compaction is vital for a home site. Without proper compaction the land will begin to move after the home is built, Jensen said.

Engineer Jensen pointed out that hillside homes are not the only types of residence that can suffer from soil movement.

"Heave and settlement can affect homes built in relatively flat areas. A soils engineer," Jensen said, "should be consulted by a builder because the engineer can recommend the type of development to be built on a selected home site."

Ward said, based on his experience, the majority of homes on the move were located on hillsides with an underground water flow problem. The contractor urged builders and homeowners to seek the advice of soils experts and read their soil reports to avoid future problems.

"When you begin to see cracks in your home, patio and driveway, the house is on the move," Ward said. Homeowners should contact a contractor immediately because the home can be saved from further severe damage if they act as soon as the tell-tale signs appear, he added.

The Bonded Remodelers Council (BRC) serves the consumer and remodeling contractor throughout the Bay Area. For council information call, 786-2270.
